Two sisters stabbed to death

Cow devours $9,000 snack

SOLDO, Italy (Reuter) — A cow in this Italian alpine village swallowed a jacket with $9,000 in its pockets, police said Sunday.

The jacket and money belonged to local hotel owner Paul Hanny who was on the way to the bank in nearby Bolzano.

He dropped in at a friend's farm where he left his jacket in the barn. Hanny tried to pull his jacket out of the cow's throat but only retrieved its sleeves.

DC-10s flying soon?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After more than a month on the ground, a U.S. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman says the beleagured U.S. DC-10 fleet could be back in the air this week.

The 138 planes used by eight U.S. airlines had carried about 60,000 to 70,000 passengers daily — about nine per cent of commercial U.S. air traffic — before they were grounded for investigation of possible defects following the worst air tragedy in U.S. history.

With the planes parked, busy summer air traffic — made busier by the gasoline shortage — has been snarled while some airlines have been forced to lay off employees.

A decision to lift the agency's order grounding the wide-body jets was expected as early as today, or possibly Tuesday, FAA spokesman Jerry Doolittle said Sunday in Washington.

But even if the order is lifted, the fate of the 138 U.S. jumbo jets rests in the hands of a federal judge.

FAA chief Langhorne Bond put together his recommendations for the grounded jetliners over the weekend in Los Angeles and was to announce his decision in Washington, Doolittle said.

The chances "would be fairly good" that the DC-10s would be back in the air this week, Doolittle said.

Carter swings to economy in marathon reassessment

By FRED BARNES
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — U.S. President Jimmy Carter, seeking a new direction for the politics and policies of his beleaguered administration, is polishing off his high-level discussions today about the nation's energy shortage and turning to talks about the troubled economy.

In his seventh day of seclusion at Camp David, Md., Carter summoned nearly 40 members of Congress to the retreat as he continued a marathon reassessment of his 2½-year-old administration.

While energy and economics were the main topics, a reshuffling of officials in the White House and Cabinet has also been touched on. But press secretary Jody Powell insisted reports of major shifts "reflect sheer speculation."

After four days of high-level talks, it appears that a variety of key issues remained to be resolved.

For instance, the president and his lieutenants are still struggling to decide on a program for developing synthetic fuels. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus were slated to testify on the subject before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee today, but were forced to beg off.

Moreover, Powell told reporters that the president was reviewing the nation's oil allocation system, which is generally viewed as ineffective. Schlesinger is known to favor scrapping it, while some White House aides prefer to retain the system as the lesser of evils.

The press secretary asserted that two crucial decisions made earlier by Carter were not being reassessed — the gradual decontrol of oil prices and the proposed tax on windfall profits of oil companies.

However, it is understood that there is a debate among Carter's advisers on whether to speed up the decontrol process, with Schlesinger favoring swifter decontrol.

For his morning session today, the president had called about 20 members of Congress to Camp David to discuss energy, including Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Sens. Henry Jackson, Mark Hatfield, Pete Domenici, and Bennett Johnston.

For the afternoon, Carter brought about 15 congressional leaders to his sequestered summit to discuss the economy with Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal and other administration economic advisers.

The shift to substantive talks on policy matters began Sunday as Schlesinger, a congresswoman, three governors and a group of energy experts conferred to hours with Carter.

Sooke pair found near Gold River

An RCMP murder team is in the Gold River area in the hunt for a killer who stabbed two Sooke sisters to death.

The bodies of the women, apparently slain as they hitch-hiked to Gold River, were found Saturday morning.

Police said they were lying on a quiet logging road a few miles short of their destination.

The women were identified as Christine Beatrice Thomas (nee Howard), 26, and Helena Rose Howard, 16, both of 1939 Powluik Crescent, Sooke.

They were found slumped together on Elk River Timber's Ucona Road.

There was no immediate indication of a motive.

RCMP did not say whether a robbery had occurred or whether there was any indication of a sexual assault.

An RCMP spokesman said the discovery was made by a pair of fishermen about 5:30 a.m., some 7 kilometres southwest of the logging town of Gold River.

Campbell River RCMP, who are co-ordinating the investigation, today issued a plea for public assistance in trying to trace the movements of the two women who were believed hitch-hiking to Gold River from their home in Sooke.

Police said the dead women have relatives in the Gold River area and they believe the two women frequently hitch-hiked back and forth between Sooke and the up-Island community.

Police say that Christine Thomas, who was 5 feet, 1 inch and weighed 126 pounds, was believed to be wearing a pink blouse and blue skirt with purple and white flowers when she left her home in Sooke.

Her sister, Helena, who was 5 feet 105 pounds, was thought to be wearing a dark blue dress with flowers and possible a light blue sweater.

Police urge anyone who saw the pair Friday or Saturday or knows anything of their movements, to contact either the Gold River RCMP detachment (at 283-2221) or Campbell River investigating officer, Sgt. Ellis Peleskey (at 286-6221).

French save 837 refugees

Times News Services

A French hospital ship arrived in Singapore today with 837 Vietnamese refugees, including three pregnant women, rescued from boats in the South China Sea, a French Embassy spokeswoman said.

The ship, the Ille de Lumiere, was sent by French voluntary organizations to provide medical aid to Vietnamese refugees on the refugee island of Pulau Bidong off Malaysia's east coast.

It has been cruising off Bidong Island giving medical aid to refugees on the island during the last three months. The island holds about 54,000 refugees.

The ship left Bidong waters Thursday and rescued the refugees from their boats adrift in the South China Sea as it sailed down Malaysia's east coast towards Singapore.

A French Embassy spokeswoman said Paris has guaranteed their resettlement in France.

The ship is manned by four doctors and a 15-man crew, all of them voluntary workers.

In Ottawa Sunday, Vietnam's ambassador to Canada claimed that most of Southeast Asia's tragic "boat people" are ethnic Chinese and their exodus from Vietnam has been engineered by the Chinese government.

Tranh Tuan Anh said on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's Sunday Morning program that China was deliberately stirring up the "wha" people, — ethnic Chinese living in Vietnam — to disrupt the war-ravaged land.

"Since 1975, the Chinese leaders have been trying to bring about more and more difficulties for Vietnam," he said. "They themselves have created the massive exodus of 'wha' people from Vietnam, with a view to causing economic, social and political turmoil in the country."

There is no "undertaking yet" to send Canadian Armed Forces aircraft to pick up stranded refugees from Malaysia and Hong Kong camps, say external affairs and defence department officials.

The external affairs official also said there is no decision yet to increase the refugee quota, which officially remains at 8,000.

Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, today urged the two million members of his union umbrella group to pull together and show compassion for the Vietnamese boat people.

Skylab a 'demon from outer space'

Times News Services

Skylab is getting closer, and NASA trackers now think it will enter Earth's atmosphere in a 30-hour period centred on 9:10 a.m. Victoria-time Wednesday.

It dipped to within 191 kilometres of Earth Sunday.

As Skylab fever continued to mount, Indian President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy said in New Delhi that the space station is a demon from which only God could save the people.

"The people today are left to their fate and only God has the power to save them . . .

Meanwhile, in neighboring Sri Lanka, some villagers have offered human skulls and chickens as sacrifices and are purchasing "Skylab oil" to prevent chunks of the falling space station from harming them.

A fist fight broke out at one point between two men because one called the other "skylab".

Execution ground

MANAGUA (AP) — Nine bullet-riddled bodies were found at a Nicaraguan government execution ground Sunday, indicating growing national guard frustration with the Sandinista guerrillas who have taken control of 24 of Nicaragua's cities and bogged down President Anastasio Somoza's drive to win them baek.

Reporters found the bodies of the young men, most of them blindfolded with their hands tied, on the shores of Lake Managua. The nine appeared to have been dead only a few hours.

National strike hits CP freight

Canadian Press

Freight handlers for Canadian Pacific Express walked off the job today across the country after a breakdown in negotiations between the company and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Collin Gribbons, the union's director of information, said that all of the about 2,700 workers from the 60 terminals were on strike. Negotiations broke down Sunday.

Union members propose a new two-year contract that would give them an hourly increase of 66 cents in the first year and 58 cents in the second.

The workers, who pick up and deliver rail, truck and air freight for Canadian Pacific, have been in a legal strike position for more than a week. Their last contract expired Dec. 31.

No end to Jubilee 'horror stories'

By [illegible] FORREST
Times Staff

The phone rings and it is another Jubilee nurse calling the Times.

"You wouldn't believe how bad the conditions have become," she said. "I'm sorry I can't publicize my name because I think they would fire me. I just want to tell you a young woman was admitted last night and they couldn't find a ward for her. She died this morning. She spent the last night of her life out in the hall."

The phone rings again. Another nurse.

"I had to work two straight shifts because they wouldn't' hire an additional nurse. I worked 15 hours. No coffee break. I didn't even have time to stop for supper."

Another call: "They keep postponing operations because of a lack of beds. Some operations are postponed again and again."

And another: "I'm doing the job of two nurses this week and I don't like to complain. But I can hardly bear it when I realize I'm not giving my patients all the attention they need. When I get home from work now I just sit down and cry."

These are a few of more than 14 calls received since the Times reported that morale has fallen to a low ebb at the Jubilee as a result of staff cutbacks.

Another call: "We moved Mrs. ---- again today. We had to move her because of lack of staff where she was. That's the third time we've moved her in three days. That patient is so sick she should not be moved!"

And another: "My daughter is a nurse and she can't give her name and she never used to complain but it's getting too much for her."

Another: "I have a sore back from lifting patients but I'm still working. I have to."

All of the comments have the same theme. The hospital does not have enough money to hire the staff it needs and, as a result, the standard of medical care is declining.

The allegation by Health Minister Bob McClelland that there is a nursing shortage was refuted by three on-call nurses.

Nurse A: "I offered to work all summer but they (the Jubilee administration) said they didn't have funds to hire me on a full-time basis."

Nurse B: "I'm always available but they only called me for eight days in May and not at all in June."

Nurse C: "I keep asking for more work but they don't call me in."

All of the nurses are frightened about the consequences of making a public statement and are concerned that even phoning a reporter might be a violation of medical ethics. But they are also angry, frustrated and worried about their patients.

Victoria Medical Association president Dr. Patricia Johnston said there is no doubt Jubilee needs a larger nursing staff.

"The nurses are overworked and their morale is declining. We have been aware of this for some time. Doctors share their concerns. But neither the doctors nor the nurses feel they can do anything about the situation."

She said only public pressure can get Health Minister McClelland to increase funding to hire additional medical employees.

An example, said said, was the minister's announcement Thursday that he is willing to increase Jubilee open heart operations to nine a week from six if requested to do so by the B.C. Medical Association. The request is expected to be made.

Johnston said the welcome announcement was the result of public pressure following a number of news stories about the long waiting list for open heart surgery.

Whether any further improvements would be forthcoming depends upon public reaction to the Jubilee's needs, she said.

Forest firms optimistic

B.C. forest companies were reasonably optimistic today that the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada would accept the final wages and benefits package which their leaders told them to reject.

Dick Lester, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau which bargains for the companies, expressed the optimism Sunday after management had quickly printed thousands of pamphlets and had them flown by charter and commerical planes to all 20 mills in the province.

The pamphlets appeared on job sites less than 24 hours after the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) agreed to recommend acceptance of the industry's final offer to their members.

There are 37,000 IWA members in coastal and southern Interior locals and about 7,500 CPU members.

The smaller (5,500) pulp union (PPWC) went the opposite way despite what the companies call the richest wages and benefits package ever offered.

"We think there's a good chance the membership will vote to accept our package," said Lester. "It's good enough for them to take without being humiliated."

The companies have offered a wage increase of 90 cents an hour this year and 9.5 per cent next year in a two-year agreement which would include additional pension benefits and credits. The base rate in the forest industry when contracts expired last month was $8.16 an hour.

Pulp companies also based their optimism on the fact that the PPWC strike vote was not that convincing at 68 per cent.

The pamphlet, which will go to all members of both pulp unions, also makes an additional pledge to adjust wage categories.

Meanwhile, CPU members at two mills at Mackenzie in northeast B.C. were off the job. About 25 members of Local 1092 walked off Saturday at the B.C. Forest Products mill and said the company was not moving on local issues. They voted Sunday to continue the walkout.

A southwesterly flow persists over B.C. and has carried a broad frontal system onto the coast. This system gave rain to the north coast overnight while spreading clouds over most of the province and will give a little rain to the south coast later today as it pushes slowly inland. A slow improvement is expected behind this system with slightly cooler air moving into B.C.

Embassy plan 'tricks' seen

BAGHDAD (AFP) — An Iraqi newspaper Sunday urged Arab countries not to weaken their stand against Canada's plan to move its embassy to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

The newspaper As Sawra said Arab countries "should not be tricked" by Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark's decision to send a special envoy on a tour of Arab capitals to help determine the feasibility of the plan.

Kootenay school workers win out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kootenay school workers whose five-week strike last year sparked an emergency session of the legislature and the new Essential Services Act have won their demands.

Provincial arbitrator Noel Hall has awarded non-teaching employees of Trail, Castlegar, Nelson and Grand Forks school districts parity with their Okanagan counterparts.

He has rejected the British Columbia School Trustees Association request for a master agreement for Selkirk College at Castlegar and the school districts.

The legislation, which drew bitter opposition from organized labor, ordered the workers back to work Dec. 11, 1978, ending a strike-lockout that began Oct. 26.

Hall, who had acted as mediator during the shutdown, was appointed arbitrator by Labor Minister Allan Williams on Jan. 22. His report follows a series of five separate arbitration hearings held this spring.

Laetrile deadly stuff cancer study shows

CHICAGO (AP) — Two researchers who administered Laetrile to rats with tumors report that each increase in the dosage of the disputed cancer treatment led to even bigger tumors and to death from cyanide poisoning.

Laetrile was found to be deadly to rats in studies done by Dr. Janardan Khandekar and Harlan Edelman of Evanston, Ill., Hospital and Northwestern University's medical school.

Khandekar reports that there was a progressive increase in the size of the tumors in those rats given Laetrile in doses he described as "realistic in terms of human ingestion."

Moreover, he found that as the Laetrile dosage went up in three groups of rats, so did the incidence of death from cyanide poisoning.

"These findings seriously question the use of amygdalin (Laetrile) in clinical medicine under any circumstances," Khandekar said.

At least two human deaths have been reported from ingestion of large amounts of Laetrile. Doctors say other patients have died needlessly because they illicitly obtained Laetrile or went to Mexico for treatment and delayed getting effective treatment for cancer.

Laetrile has been widely promoted as a cancer treatment, but the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as well as a number of scientific organizations deem it worthless and potentially harmful.

The U.S. Supreme Court last month ruled unanimously that the federal government may continue to ban interstate traffic in the substance, which is derived primarily from the pits of apricots and similar fruits.

The court's ruling followed action by 20 states legalizing the use of Laetrile on patients terminally ill with cancer.

Fish industry door still open for further contract talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A fish industry spokesman said during the weekend that the Fisheries Association of British Columbia is prepared to continue contract talks despite a strike vote by 4,300 shoreworkers represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

Jerry Spitz, association president, said although the industry does not have much room to move in negotiations it has not slammed the door on further talks.

Bargaining could move more quickly now that the union has completed a strike vote, Spitz added. The union members voted by a 72-per-cent majority to take strike action if necessary to back demands.

Union spokesman Jack Nichol said Saturday that the company offer of a pay increase of 58 cents an hour across the board and 85 cents for skilled trades is not enough. The offer would give shoreworkers a base rate of $8 an hour.

Works program altered

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Finance Minister John Crosbie says there will be an announcement this week regarding the Canada Works Program, indicating it could be of interest to Newfoundland because of the high unemployment rate in the province.

Crosbie declined to indicate the nature of the announcement, although there has been speculation the new Progressive Conservative government may make major changes in the program.

The next phase of the program begins in September.

Crosbie, here for what he said was a rest after a hectic round of meetings since he took the job last month, also indicated in an interview the federal government will seek permission to increase the amount it can borrow.

He said the deficit in the present budget is about $10.45 billion.

He added that increased borrowing will not be required to pay for a program promised by the Tories in the campaign for the May 22 federal election, under which mortgage interest would be deductible for tax purposes.

Details of the plan will be outlined in Crosbie's first federal budget, expected around the end of October, he says.

Human rights 'back 10 years'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A decision to allow a Catholic school to fire a teacher for marrying a divorced Protestant set British Columbia human rights legislation back 10 years, according to Kathleen Ruff, provincial human rights director.

A human rights branch board of inquiry ruled Friday that St. Thomas Aquinas high school in North Vancouver did not contravene the British Columbia human rights code by firing Margaret Caldwell.

Ms. Ruff said the decision opens the way for other employers to discriminate on the basis of sex, marital status, religion or racial background. She said she has asked Labor Minister Allan Williams, in charge of the human rights branch, for an appeal.

"There was a loophole in the old human rights code where sex could be a bona fide qualification for employment but it was thought that the current code would close that," she said in an interview.

"Now that sets us right back to where we were 10 years ago when people thought that loophole should be closed."

The board ruled the school could use religion as an employment qualification.

At a three-day hearing in May, when Mrs. Caldwell testified she was given termination notice shortly after her marriage in December, 1977, and was told she had violated the school's philosphy.

Ruff said the ruling sets a precedent for employers to discriminate.

Ms. Ruff also said the board ignored an argument by lawyer David Vickers that the school should not practice religious intolerance because it receives public funds under the Independent Schools Support Act.

Al Blakey, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said that "we would hope there would be some way of possibly appealing this, other than that, we would ask the minister of education to reconsider public funding of the Catholic school system."

"If he doesn't we would have to ask the question, how long is he going to consider fostering religious intolerance?"

The teachers' federation has asked Williams for an appeal as has the B.C. Liberal Party following a weekend caucus in Duncan.

Meanwhile, the inspector of independent schools will review the status of St. Thomas Aquinas, but Education Minister Pat McGeer said the inspector will review only the curriculum offered and its delivery.

He said neither he nor the ministry will get involved in the current controversy.

Pope top of pops on Italian radio

The Vatican Radio's pop division hasn't played it yet, but it appears the Wojtyla Disco Dance — a lively tune about Pope John Paul — is the hit of the summer in Italy. "He's the groove, he's the man, the new pope in the Vatican," say the lyrics. The record has been out for only two weeks, but is reported to have sold about 30,000 copies. "I don't know if the pope has heard of it," said promoter Freddie van Stegeren, "but we are applying for a private audience to present the record." Vatican prelates are aware of the record and say they prefer not to talk about it.

According to Bianca Jagger — whose sole occupation has been the business of appearing in various places — says when it's all over she wants to get into a serious line of work. She's in London now, preparing for the next round in her divorce battle with rock star husband Mick, but she's been at home, staying with her father in war-torn Nicaragua, where food is more precious than gold and the curfew is 6 p.m. The experience apparently sobered her. She told attorney Marvin Mitchelson once the divorce is settled, she wants to return to Nicaragua and go to work — for the American Red Cross.

First, the first brother got himself consistently in hot water as a result of drinking beer. Now he's in hot water — at least in St. Louis — for talking about it. Billy Carter, taping a segment of the Phil Donahue Show Sunday before a live audience, was asked what he thought of Budweiser. Said he, with typical candor, "I tried it but I didn't like it." That didn't go down too well in the city where the brew is brewed. Carter was on the show to talk about his recent 24-beers-a-day alcoholism, which he says he's whipped. Said he, "I think I was probably an alcoholic the day I was born."

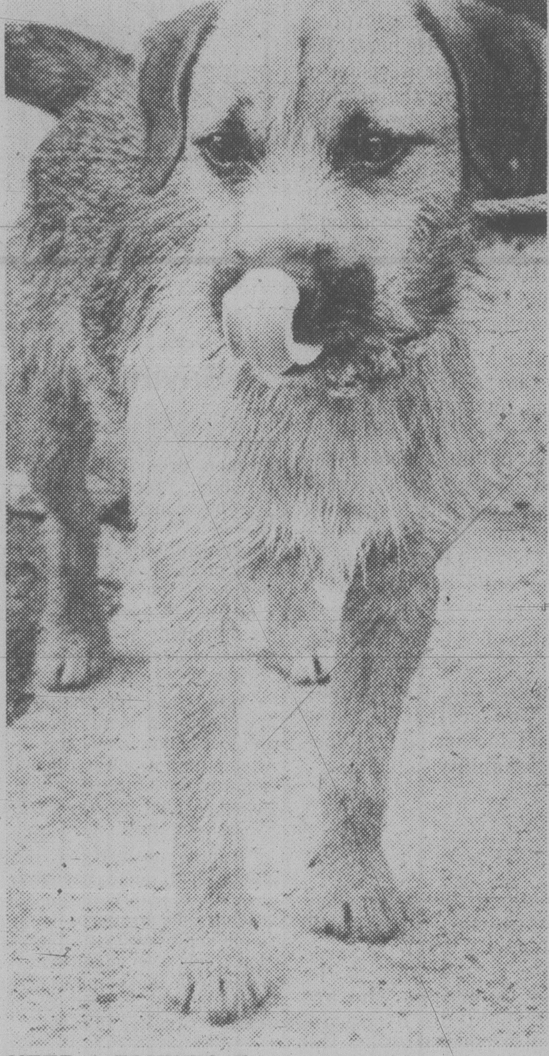
It was easy says George Kadenick. He just used the "Damascus barrel technique." It landed him a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records Sunday — for spitting a cherry pit farther than a pit has been spit before. Kadenick stripped the title from the previous champ, Bill "Pits" Mobley, of Findlay, Ohio, at the sixth annual International Cherry Pit Spitting Competition at Eau Claire, Mich. Says Kadenick of his technique, "You've got to roll your tongue, put the pit at the back of the tongue and just blow." The "blow" sent the pit flying almost 20 metres.

Wilding, Liz and junior (1953)

Actor Michael Wilding, who married Elizabeth Taylor at the height of his career as romantic matinee idol, died Sunday from head injuries received in a fall at his home in Chichester in the south of England. He was 66. News of his death was broken to Miss Taylor in Virginia by their son, Michael Wilding Jr., and she was reported to be "very upset." Wilding, in seclusion since the death in 1975 of his fourth wife, actress Margaret Leighton, was alone in his country cottage when he apparently fell and struck his head. Wilding was married to Miss Taylor in February 1952, when she was 20 and he was 39 — and in the midst of a flourishing movie career portraying debonair and charming romantic heroes. They were divorced five years later. She was the second of his four wives.

Stunt motorcyclist Robin Winter-Smith died Sunday when his machine failed to leap over a line of 32 Rolls-Royces at an air show at Elstree near London. His new 250cc motorcycle built up a speed of more than 128 kilometres an hour but crash-landed on the remp at the end of the 71-metre long row of cars. "For some reason or other he just didn't make the distance," show organizer Alan Dyer said. "You would have expected to see him higher in the air before starting the descent. It just wasn't there. . . . Another three feet (metre) and he would have been home and dry."

And finally, in Atlanta, Ga., Mary Ann Jones Dunn, who was recently divorced, can't get "cat support" to keep her 100-feline family together, a Fulton Superior Court judge has ruled. Mrs. Dunn, 54, says she can't afford the cat food and cleaning bills that are running up to $1,500 a month, and asked Judge Osgood Williams to require her former husband, Henry Grady Dunn, to chip in. In denying the request, Williams said state law "does not authorize support payments for animals."



NEED A FRIEND? This two-year-old male terrier cross-breed could fill the bill. From the looks of it, he'll bring a harty appetite along with him. Dies at 80

NEW YORK (AP) — Cornelia Otis Skinner, the actress and writer who was a co-author of Our Hearts Were Young and Gay, died today at her New York home. She was 80 and had been ill for the last year. In her writing, Miss Skinner specialized in chronicling her misadventures and made them the subject of witty pieces of satire.

Major SAC test set

OFFUTT AFB, Neb. (UPI) — The Strategic Air Command's largest and most comprehensive defense exercise in more than 20 years began at 5 p.m. PDT Sunday at all SAC bases in the United States, a spokesman at SAC headquarters said.

The week-long operation, called Global Shield 79, is a practice for what SAC would do if the United States were under attack. Information on the exercise was released earlier this year, but the exact time it would take place was not announced.

Maj. Herbert Meyer, a media liason officer at SAC headquarters, said about 650 bomber, tanker, reconnaisance and command post aircraft will take part in the exercise at more than 30 SAC locations throughout the country.

SAC air and missile crews will receive simulated orders to execute strikes against hypothetical enemy targets, he said. SAC also will be conducting command post exercises to evaluate the ability of SAC commanders and their staffs.

During the exercise, unarmed aircraft will disperse to civilian and military airfields and fly simulated alert missions, he said. Unarmed SAC B-52 and FB-111 bombers also will be flying low-level training routes approved by the Federal Aviation Administration, Meyer said.

Like woman of 80 at the age of five

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Five-year-old Penny Vantine is going deaf and has arthritis and cataracts in both eyes. Because of a rare illness, she may die soon of what resembles old age.

Doctors say that because of a rare disease Penny is aging at the rate of 15 to 20 years every 12 months. She has the appearance and many of the ailments of a woman in her 80s, doctors say.

The child has been losing weight and now weighs only nine pounds and stands 29 inches tall. Before long, she may die, essentially of old age, Dr. Harold Sterling said.

"She is probably going to have a cardiac or respiratory illness she can't handle," Sterling said. "She will either have a heart attack or pneumonia."

He said he fears it will happen this year and that nothing can be done for the child, who suffers from Cockayne's Syndrome.

An unjust decision

The clash of principles involved in the dismissal of a teacher at St. Thomas Aquinas school will not be resolved by the decision of a board of inquiry to uphold the firing.

Margaret Caldwell lost her job not because she failed to transmit the secrets of typing and bookkeeping to her students or couldn't maintain order in the classroom. It was not inefficiency or gross misconduct, the two main reasons allowed for dismissal under the Public Schools Act.

She was fired simply because she married a divorced man — a Protestant — in a civil ceremony. There were no complaints at the school that this impaired her teaching abilities. No evidence was presented at the inquiry to suggest that her students were adversely affected.

St. Thomas Aquinas dismissed her because, in its view, her private life was inconsistent with Roman Catholic doctrine on marriage. As the church does not recognize divorce, in its eyes she married someone who was still married to another — a bad example for the boys and girls under her instruction.

The board of inquiry established under the Human Rights Act agreed with the school. A Catholic school "can demand that Catholic teachers should practise what the church preaches, namely, that one should not marry a person who, in the church's eyes, is married to someone else.

"In our opinion, that same principle applies to St. Thomas Aquinas school and to other Catholic schools in the province operated by the respondent society."

Human rights director Kathleen Ruff suggests that the decision sets back the cause of human rights in British Columbia by at least 10 years, and the former NDP education minister, Eileen Dailly, is incensed at the ruling.

What is particularly galling to defenders of civil rights is the fact that the school spends tax dollars, but is not subject to the dictates of the legislation governing almost every other school in the province. The NDP wants funding withdrawn from St. Thomas Aquinas, and the inquiry decision appealed to the courts.

The so-called independent schools lobbied strongly for the Independent Schools Support Act, which provides out of the provincial treasury about one-quarter of the amount per student which the ministry of education spends on pupils in the public system.

Some restrictions go along with the grants. An inspector of independent schools was named. He must be satisfied that they meet minimum educational requirements and that the school facilities are "adequate" before he certifies them for government grants.

Education Minister Pat McGeer has instructed him to review the status of St. Thomas Aquinas school, but that involves only the curriculum. He hasn't the power to reverse the decision of the inquiry board, or the original firing, but there may be grounds for investigation under a section of the act which forbids any grant to a school which fosters "religious intolerance or persecution." It may be questionable whether this applies to St. Thomas Aquinas, but the issue deserves to be fully ventilated.

The situation is offensive. It is not right that a school accepts public funds, but claims immunity from laws which protect B.C. teachers in public schools. The independent schools have agreed to teach the basic curriculum set by the government; any religious instruction beyond that is none of the government's business, as it should be.

Mrs. Caldwell was not teaching religion, but the same sort of commercial courses taught in the public schools. The fact that she chose to marry outside her church does not affect her ability to teach.

Not a good excuse

Immigration Minister Ron Atkey gave a couple of reasons this weekend why he is not opening Canada's doors too wide to the unfortunate Vietnamese refugees, the boat people.

The first made sense. He wants to ensure that jobs and housing will be available for all the refugees admitted. Fair enough. There's not much point in bringing the refugees from one atrocious situation into another that's not much better.

The second reason Atkey gave, however, is little short of insulting to all fair-minded Canadians. The minister fears, he said, that admission of too many "boat people" might lead to a "backlash" — whether against the refugees or against the Conservative government wasn't made clear.

The admission that the fear of such a backlash is affecting government policy is nothing more than pandering to a small number of bigots in Canadian society. It is a message to those few bigots that if they raise enough fuss, the government will give in to them. If they are unwilling to allow immigrants of a different racial background — even stateless refugee immigrants who may otherwise be forced to starve or drown in overcrowded boats off the Asian coast — the government will agree to that just to pacify them.

The idea is an insult to the millions of Canadians who are concerned about the desperate plight of the "boat people" and who would be glad to help them make a new start in Canada.

Atkey should certainly ensure that jobs and housing will be available for the refugees Canada takes in. He should not, however, restrict the flow of refugees — perhaps condemning some of them to death — just because of fears of political backlash from a small minority of Canadians.

Saving energy

It was interesting to read that President Carter was incensed by French president Valery Giscard d'Estaing's recent statement that the U.S. has done nothing to curb its extravagent use of oil. It was only a few short months ago that dear old Jimmy said precisely the same thing to the people of the U.S. during a fireside chat. It was even more recently that he admitted the same thing to both houses of congress. So why would he be incensed?

It was also interesting to read all the gloom and doom reports regarding the last holiday weekend — telling us what a terrible catastrophe it was that some parts of the U.S. had an occasional gasoline shortage. I could readily see what a disaster it was.

People actually walked in the parks, had home barbeque parties, used their local recreational facilities, attended local sports events, stayed home and played with the kids. Pollution levels were significantly reduced along with the number of auto accidents. Oh yes, anyone can see what a terrible situation that is.

In any event a ready solution to the North American energy problem was available in 1972 and is still availble in 1979. The difficulty is that nobody seems ready to discuss it let alone implement it. That solution is to limit the engine capacity of all passenger automobiles to 2,000 cubic centimeters. Such a program if initiated now would be virtually complete by 1984. In Canada, this would save over three billion gallons of fuel annually. In the U.S. the savings would be over 20 billion gallons.

Such action would bring North America close to self-sufficiency, reduce noise and air pollution and the demand for more highways. It would stabilize and revalue the dollar as the primary cause of deficit spending would be removed. It would reduce inflation and provide economic stimulation through a major program of reclaiming large autos and manufacturing small ones.

It can't be done you say? It can be done if enough people have enough courage to take a long hard look at the alternatives. The civil disorder and transportation chaos which is happening during the hot summer of 1979 is nothing compared to the problems of the long cold winters ahead. We in Canada certainly cannot afford to be complacent as we look at the U.S. problems.

If we do not take dramatic action to reduce North American fuel consumption, if we permit the politicians to convince us that the real villains are the oil-exporting nations, if we can be persuaded that our way of life is being threatened by the Arab nations, how long will it take the ultimate power of multinational cartels, with their unlimited media access, to convince North Americans to go after mideast oil supplies by force of arms?

The utter stupidity of this scenario is, of course, that even unlimited access to Arab oil would only delay a major fuel shortage by a decade if North American consumption is not checked. Therefore we should understand that sensible reductions in fuel consumption, the size of automobiles on a mandatory basis and similar economies do not mean the end of the world and do not mean economic disaster.

Failure to take advantage of these reasonable options will lead us surely down the path to a confrontation which is frightening to contemplate. — Ian Cass, 3844 Merriman Drive.

Peace needed

The summit meeting between U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Soviet President Leonid T. Brezhnev, aimed at averting a nuclear holocaust, was a big step in the direction of preventing another world war. However, there still remains the problem of getting the agreement ratified by the U.S. Senate; hopefully that body, after their study and debate on its contents, will find good reason for endorsation. That action will strengthen the peace forces struggle to end the arms race engendered by such organizations as NATO and NORAD that draw billions of dollars from our national treasury that should be used to end unemployment, provide better and higher education and medical care, etc. for all people.

The struggle to maintain and strengthen detente to the point of making it irreversible must continue.

Regressive views such as male superiority, racial and national superiority and that security is dependent on domination, economically, politically and militarily by possession of the biggest and most powerful weapons must be eradicated along with the powerful monopolies profiteering by the arms trade, preparation for war and war.

This year of the child must establish a course towards lasting world peace. Then those of us in our declining years will be able to rest that way on our day of judgment. — D. Frankham, 304-373 Burnside East.

Lie detectors

Regarding the issue of involuntary lie detector tests, as raised by New Democratic Party MLA Stu Leggatt, kindly add my concern to his.

An all-embracing acceptance of this technique is leading to serious erosions of many of the fundamental rights and freedoms upon which an open and democratic society is based.

A society that refuses to accept the sinister implications of its means lays itself open to the eventual totalitarian definition of its ends. We are slowly but irresversibly losing our privacy, our potential for creative work and our basic human dignity. The matter of involuntary lie detector tests is but another example of this steady erosion.

The task of stemming back creeping totalitarianism is herculean. Mr. Leggatt should be congratulated and given our full support for his efforts. We can only hope that his is not a lone voice of sanity and courage amidst the confusion of stimulative deficits, balanced budgets, crime rates and other such inanities that masquerade as responsible political leadership. — D. Tsimon, 2841 Seaview Road.

Food monopoly

The near monopoly of the food supermarkets and the blatant markup of prices is a matter which should be investigated and corrected.

If it is a crime, punishable by prison terms and heavy fines, to fix bids as in the recent case of the dredging firms, is it not also a crime to monopolize the food market?

Trying to correct it by trying to defeat inflation is an exercise in futility. Inflation will defeat itself in due course by bringing on a depression.

The food supermarkets should be required to submit audited accounts to the government, any profit in excess of an agreed amount, say 10 per cent should be taxed 100 per cent as excess profit. Manipulating the accounts to defeat this should be a criminal offence carrying jail terms and heavy fines.

What hope is there of the governments of big business, Conservative or Liberal, taking such action. None unless the people organize to defeat them.

Many years ago a government inquiry proved that the food supermarkets were making 17 per cent profit which now may be 30 per cent or more. — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

MARCEL PEPIN

In referendum, Quebec will vote with the odds

QUEBEC — The Quebec referendum will take place next spring. Everybody expects the long awaited vote will put an end to the uncertainty financial and industrial leaders have complained about since Rene Levesque was sworn in as premier.

The irony is that this vote will not settle anything.

According to the premier himself, the referendum question will "deal with the essential option of the government, that is a mandate to repatriate all our taxes and our legislative powers while maintaining the economic links with Canada."

Even if the present government received a mandate to demand from Ottawa and all the other provinces the right to act as a sovereign state, this would not mean that the people had voted for sovereignty. At best, it would create a political event that would strengthen the bargaining power of the government. At worst, if the vote is negative, it would give the status quo a boost and lead some Quebecers to desperate illegal actions.

Ryan's alternative

[illegible] either case, the uncertainty is here to stay for a good while. There is only one way to get out of the trap. It would be to present a sound alternative, already accepted by leaders of English Canada and ready to be implemented quickly.

This is the course chosen by Liberal leader Claude Ryan, who is actively engaged in consultations with the premiers of the other provinces, and also with the new cabinet in Ottawa, to make sure that a renewed federalist proposal can make inroads in other capitals.

On the other hand, Quebecers know that English Canada will want to benefit from any change. If more power is granted to the province, it will obviously be because both Ottawa and the nine other premiers prefer that kind of devil to the Levesque proposal. What better way is there to build stronger bargaining power, even if, in the end, Quebec agrees to settle for less than for what it is asking them to vote "yes" in the referendum?

So if people choose to support Levesque, many of them will keep that in mind, knowing that in the short run, even if he does win, nothing in their daily life will be changed, except that they will have created a political event that could alter the course of the usual negotiations between Quebec and spoksemen from English Canada.

It seems to me that calling the referendum an historic move is somewhat exaggerated, because it is already clear that it will be a meaningless consultation, since the question will not be: Are you in favor of staying in, or getting out, of Canada?

If, by any chance, Ryan and his allies, mainly Joe Clark and William Davis of Ontario, agree on a specific proposal to rejuvenate the present guarantees that they will have complete control over their cultural future as a people, Levesque will be in deep trouble.

But that proposal ought to be known and accepted prior to the referendum and not presented as a would-be alternative in some remote future. Any promise to work hard at renewing federalism will fall flat. The Parti Quebecois was born precisely on the grounds that the more Quebecers try to adapt federalism to their specific needs, the fewer results they obtain. To believe that this old tune can work again is plain naivete.

The sad fact is that the Canadian option is clearly ahead in Quebec, but the sovereignty-association option can succeed by default. Federalist spokesmen will be looked upon as supporters of the status quo, if they cannot manage to agree on something new and feasible.

If Levesque has a tough fight on his hands selling a still unclear option, trying to hide the ultimate goal of his supporters, that is a free republic of Quebec, federalist groups also have a huge task ahead.

In the months ahead, strategy will not suffice. Substance will be badly needed. Blackmail from business or other provinces will be bitterly resented and bluntly rejected.

Time has come to play a frank game. Is anyone in Ottawa aware of that?

I have my doubts, since Pierre Trudeau and all his Quebec ministers, normally in close contact with the mood prevailing in this province, staunchly ignored the determination of Quebecers to change the system. Will Clark take a chance on softening the federal stand?

This is the key that will open the door to a federalist victory in Quebec. Emotional calls not to break a decent and promising country will not suffice, since the stakes are mainly to improve Quebec life and Quebecois power.

All Quebecers need to side with Levesque in large numbers is some further evidence that English Canada will resist some sort of special status for this province, the heart of "the other nation" forming Canada.

Ryan understood that long ago. That is the reason [illegible] working so hard to develop a consensus among English-Canadian opinion leaders, including government spokesmen, about certain acceptable reforms. If he fails to get some specific assurances from his federalist friends, the debate will take the shape of a protest vote, in the form of a "yes" vote in the referendum, thus creating the sort of political event the PQ brains trust is expecting.

The step-by-step policy the Quebec government is following does not call for a "yes" vote on the independence issue. It just tries, at this moment, to shift the car in gear, at a very low speed, hoping that further events will permit them eventually to drive faster towards their ultimate goal. They are convinced that time is on their side, while federalists still believe that a "no vote" will settle the issue. The latter are making a mistake.

In fact federalists can only win if they succeed in attracting public attention, not to Canada as such, but to a reform plan that all governments concerned are ready to implement right away. If the vote is "no" and nothing is done, the next vote will be a resounding "yes." That is the gamble Claude Morin is making and he may be on the right track, if the recent history of federal-provincial negotiations teaches us anything.

On their way to the polling stations, Quebecers will remember the numerous and frustrating attempts to redesign the relationships between Quebec and the rest of the country. These various attempts failed because all federal governments resisted the two nation theory, insisting that Quebec be treated as a province like the others.

Puzzling campaign

Quebecers understand why the federal government acted that way. It had no other choice, the bulk of Canadian voters being opposed to granting some sort of special status to the French province. But Quebecers do not want to live with that situation any longer. Upon that, all Quebec political parties agree.

So, what's the solution?

Quebecers already know that only their strong determination can speed the change. They know that Ryan will have more persuasive power than his predecessors ever enjoyed only because the PQ stepped into power. So, unless they are offered something really meaningful on the federalist side, they will be tempted to give some help to Levesque. Even Ryan will benefit from that in some future time.

The more one looks at this issue, the more one is convinced that Quebecers are not about to choose between Canada and Quebec, but rather will decide what is the best way to move the odds to their side, whatever happens.

The campaign that is about to split the province in half already looks puzzling and exhausting.

Gandhi expecting to serve jail term

By STUART AUERBACH
The Washington Post

NEW DELHI — The busload of visitors from the Indian state of Gujarat sat patiently for more than an hour in the shade of a large tree, just to have their pictures taken with Indira Gandhi.

Earlier, she gave an audience to a group of Yugoslav toruists after they had asked their tourbus driver where she lived.

Gandhi, 61, remains India's best-known political figure. But the former prime minister's attempts to recover from the humiliating defeat her authoritarian government suffered more than two years ago appear stalled at the moment.

Some of her former allies in the Congress (I) — for Indira — Party have turned against her, charging in public what many people have said in private — that she is "arbitrary," "autocratic," "authoritarian," and driven by "personal egoism." They contend that she is unduly influenced by her son Sanjay, 32. He has been called "her weakest link" by Devaraj Urs, a former political supporter who has turned against her.

Moreover, the government appears determined to put both Gandhi and her son in jail for excesses allegedly committed during the 19 months of "Emergency Rule," when she put strict curbs on individual, political and press freedoms.

Gandhi has obvious support, both on the Delhi cocktail party circuit and in the streets. Successful businessmen openly yearn for the days of the "Emergency," when they say workers were afraid to strike and civil servants were forced to put in a full day of productive work.

"It sounds like Mussolini, but at least the trains ran on time," one said.

At the other end of the economic scale, a poor scooter-taxi driver complained about the soaring inflation since Prime Minister Morarji Desai's Janata Party took over the government in March, 1977. Prices have risen 6.7 per cent since February and planners estimate inflation may hit 17 per cent before the end of the year.

"We all want Mrs. Gandhi back," the taxi driver said.

Perhaps more importantly, a rally she called in May drew a disappointing crowd of 35,000 after her supporters had predicted hundreds of thousands at a protest against the establishment of special courts to try cases against her and Sanjay.

GANDHI
. . . 'one of the sights'

But lack of money is not stopping Gandhi from travelling through the country and keeping her name before the public. Recently she visited the Nadia district near Calcutta, where Hindus and Moslems have been battling in communal riots.

"The Moslems there are in an absolute panic and the government is not at all bothered," Gandhi said in an interview in her bungalow here.

"There is no respect for the government, and a government cannot function without respect," she said, claiming the present government is unable to handle the country's economic and political problems.

Gandhi said her major mistake during her 11 years as prime minister was in allowing the emergency to run as long as it did. Originally, she wanted it to last only two months.

Although she has been criticized in the past for not being contrite for the censorship, political jailings without trails and spying on individuals that went on during the emergency, she apologized freely during hour-long interview.

"I apologize for any hardships I caused, especially to those who were arrested and to the politicians and the press," she said. "But I do not apologize for the things we did that were good — for arresting the smugglers and black marketeers who contributed to inflation."

One point on which she would not back down was her relations with her son Sanjay.

In his mother's eyes he has done no wrong.

Meanwhile, the government appears determined to keep her from regaining political power. When she won election to parliament last year, she was stripped on her seat and sent to jail for contempt and breach of privilege.

Prime Minister Desai admitted at a recent news conference what had long been rumored: He had pressured the chief minister of Tamil Nadu, M. G. Ramachandran, to withdraw his support from Gandhi's bid in May to run for parliament from a safe seat in South India, forcing her to withdraw from the election.

Soon she will be embroiled in court trials. The first three cases have been filed against her and there are indications that more will follow.

The trials will keep her here in New Delhi, instead of travelling the country, campaigning for support.

She believes the trials are intended to convict her on charges sufficiently serious to bar her from political office and put her in jail.

By PATRICK SEALE
The Observer

Three months after banding together to condemn President Sadat for his peace treaty with Israel, the anti-Egypt front looks as if it might well collapse under its own internal contradictions. Today Sadat seems in better shape than his opponents.

The latest evidence of their weakness was the recent failure of Syria and Iraq to bring about their much heralded union. There is rejoicing in Cairo at this setback.

An effective institutionalized union of Iraq and Syria — a potential grouping 20 million strong, underpinned by oil revenues of some 16 billion dollars, and fielding armies of about 400,000 men — would have been a credible alternative to Egypt's natural predominance. But it was not to be.

From the start the anti-Sadat coalition was a ramshackle affair, but its crucial weakness has been its inability to produce a credible political program. This has brought home the truth that, without Egypt, the Arabs can have no strategy of either confrontation with Israel or negotiation.

As a result, Egypt's going it alone has put the eastern Arabs into an unenviable situation, vulnerable to all the stresses and strains of the region. Hence the very considerable unease apparent today in every Arab capital.

Of these stresses, the main one comes from the brutal ending of the honeymoon between the Islamic revolution in Iran and its Arab neighbours. In the last month relations between Iran and Iraq have worsened to the point where Tehran Radio calls for a mass uprising against the Baghdad "gangsters and tyrants."

Pincer

The fallout from events in Iran has caught the Iraqi Ba'thist regime in a pincer movement: Kurdish guerrilla armies are once more on the war path in the northern mountains, while in the south Iraqi Shi'as (the less privileged majority of the population) are being stirred to frenzy by the charismatic Khomeyni across the border. Faced with such formidable problems, Iraq is in poor posture to take on either Sadat or Israel.

In turn, the fragile sheikhdoms of the lower Gulf, which also contain large, increasingly restless Shi'a and Iranian communities, have been shaken by the revival of ancient territorial claims against them, made recently by prominent Iranian divines.

If Iraq and the Gulf are understandably preoccupied with Iran, Syria has its anxious gaze on the Lebanon, the bog where its 30,000-man army suffers constant humiliation from Israeli raids against which the Syrians dare not riposte. By its ruthless, almost daily action in Lebanon, Israel seems to be saying to President Assad of Syria, "Fight or get out!" To do either might endanger his regime.

An unfortunate side-effect which Assad must contend with is that in three years of dubious peace-keeping, his army has fallen into indiscipline, corruption — and plain thieving. Its unpopularity among the Lebanese is considerable.

Meanwhile, at home, prominent Alawis — the sect to which the Syrian president himself belongs — continue to fall to hit-and-run assassins, generally believed to be Islamic activists.

It is these internal troubles plaguing both Syria and Iraq, the core countries of Arab Asia, which prevent their embarking on unity and presenting a credible alternative strategy to Sadat's.

Saudi Arabia, the third major (if reluctant) partner in the anti-Sadat coalition, is less immediately threatened than either Iraq or Syria, but it, too, has its problems, of which perhaps the most important is the division in the ranks of the ruling princes.

For several months now they have been debating how best to react to Sadat's treaty and to America's Middle East policy, which faces them with the dangerous dilemma of having to choose between the West and the Arabs.

Leverage

But both camps know that the only way out of the Saudi dilemma is to secure effective American action on the Palestine question. The Saudis' sole leverage is oil. But they intend to use it with the utmost discretion, so as not to damage the West unduly or Saudi Arabia's close relationship with it.

A cautious diplomatic campaign is under way to bring home to Americans the link between the energy crisis and the Palestine problem. This scenario hardly suggests a Saudi crusade against Egypt.

So sorry! Sincerely, NASA

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Although NASA assures us there is nothing to worry about when its 77-ton space station comes down in a rain of metal, it is prepared for every contingency.

If a close relative, for example, should be struck by a falling piece of debris, you will receive a letter of apology from the space agency, which will read as follows:

"Please accept our sincere regrets for the bereavement your family has sustained during the recent loss of one of our space stations.

"When time has softened the shock of this untoward event you may be interested to reflect that the probability of anyone's being hit by falling space-station fragments was so remote as to be, for all practical purposes, impossible. In years to come, we trust, you will take pride in kinship to a loved one who beat impossible odds to emblazon your family name in the Guinness World Book of Records."

"DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Darned if it doesn't seem like, sometimes, everybody's luck comes up smiling. Take a fellow like you, for instance. If your underpopulated little country were as densely peopled as India or China, you might have quite a mess on your hands right now, instead of having nothing more to complain about than a few flattered water buffalos and some fresh craters in the wadi.

"You are a lucky man. India and China are lucky countries, and we at NASA are twice as lucky because our space station decided to come down on your digs rather than on the Congressional District of some big mucky-muck on the House Space Appropriations Subcommittee.

"We'd like to congratulate you with an appropriate gesture. Our idea is to put a champagne bottle into orbit in your honor, but if you have religious scruples against alcohol, we could just as easily orbit three cans of frozen orange juice."

If you have neighbors in for a backyard barbecue and it's spoiled by a half-ton chunk of space station falling through your roof and excavating a 60-foot pit in your cellar, you will receive the following letter:

"HI, NEIGHBOR: Well, nobody's perfect, as we say down here at Houston when one of the boys forgets to put the cap back on the rocket-fuel tank. By golly, we at NASA come pretty close, though. We told you not to bother going inside to take shelter when the space station came down, and we knew what we were talking about, didn't we?

"If you hadn't been out in the back yard stirring martinis you would never have known what hit your house. Then you wouldn't have been able to apply to Uncle Sam for compensation, to which you are fully entitled, as we explained weeks ago in the papers. If you'd paid attention to what we were putting out in the press releases, you would have known this and wouldn't have gotten so worked up cursing the government that you forgot your cooking and burned up your steaks.

"If we got flustered like that every time something went wrong at NASA, we'd never be able to orbit three pounds of sirloin, much less 77 tons of space station."

NASA is also prepared to get letters out quickly to countries in which famous monuments might be struck. For example:

"DEAR GREECE: It's a crying shame about the Parthenon, but as American daddies used to tell their sons back in the days when the Model-T finally broke down, nothing man makes will last forever."

And, "DEAR INDIA: We know you feel like making a fuss about the hole in the Taj Majal, but we've got some fancy new Epoxy patching compounds, developed for quick-fix jobs in space, that can probably seal it up so that it's hardly noticeable."

Among other contingencies for which NASA is prepared is the situation in which an Italian husband visiting another man's wife emerges from her apartment to find his car flattened by descended space station:

"OKAY, SIGNOR TWO-TIMER: Just try screaming about what our spacestation did to you Maserapi if you want to know what headache really is.

"Any claims you try to make will, we assure you, be thoroughly investigated by the U.S. Congress, which takes a dim view of non-Congressmen spending afternoons with other men's wives. When they get through airing the details for the benefit of the public, including your wife and the lady's husband, you'll be begging us to put you on the moon.

"On the other hand, if we both keep our little secrets, you can collect from your insurance company by telling them your car was battered by pig-wielding zealots of the Red Brigades while we can keep our good reputation for safe orbiting."

Show's name says it all

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There are laugh shows, goon shows, the Rocky Horror Show. And then there's the Smile Show, a 27-year Victoria tradition, along with its founder, Jerry Gosley.

This year the Smile Show, back at the Empress Hotel for the summer, is precisely what its title suggests; an amiable, likeable, tunefully cheerful entertainment.

There have been editions of the Smile Show that were first-rate, a few that were downright bad. Good, bad and so-so, most had highlights that were hilarious.

But this one is different. It has a talented and exceptionally even cast. It is long on imagination (not surprising seeing the director is Kaleidoscope's gifted Paul Liittich) and short on the sort of broad comedy that provides the anticipated diet of ham and cornball. The only gut laughs were provoked by Jerry doing what appears to come naturally — the tiddly British colonel and Queen Victoria.

If Jerry is really making his farewell appearance this year, the producers are going to have to look hard and far for the input of energy, the unabashed low comedy and the sheer dedication that Jerry has always brought to the show.

Saturday when I attended, the show had been running for a week. It was smooth, fast, all production details were excellent, particularly Anton Gosley's sets and over-all stage design. The two-man orchestra — Chris Donison on piano and organ, Ben Manning on drums — was nothing short of brilliant.

But the cast was working terribly hard to get the audience into the spirit of the evening without gaining the expected response. Often where there should have been laughs there was silence. Yet you looked around at the ballroom full of people and saw smiles and pleasure on most faces. They just weren't laughing out loud much and invitations to "sing along" were getting little result.

At least one of the audience participation songs fails because the cards held aloft by actors have too many words on them to be easily read and the moving spots obliterate as much as they reveal.

The Smile Show's traditional dancing line is definitely under-stressed this year but the singing voices are excellent and the cast is strong on eye-appeal. The first half ends on a high with a Camelot send-up that includes two superb dragons. Marvellous Party in the Bengal Bar (Noel Coward) fills the stage with magnificent life-size puppets and Beach Ball Ballet proves to be one of the major laughmakers.

Performance honors are earned by vivacious Toni Sinclair, Lori Charters, Vanessa Le Roux, Don Morrison for his vocal contribution and David Kirk who has a distinct talent for impersonation.

Wall tomb for 1,000

LLERENA, Spain (Reuter) — Workers restoring a church in this southwestern town found at least 1,000 mummufied bodies when an 18th-century wall collapsed, Llerena's Mayor Jose Vasquez said Thursday. He said the bodies, many of them contorted as if they had perished in a violent death, were in the tower of the church, a mosque converted after the Arab domination of Spain. The position of some bodies indicated they may have been walled in rather than buried. Some wore well-preserved clothes.

Effluent permit for Claremont

Saanich School District has been granted an effluent discharge permit for Claremont Senior Secondary School which has been operating without one for two years.

Copies of the permit were sent to 34 Cordova Bay residents who opposed the district's Jan. 3 application because they said the septic disposal system allowed effluent to seep into ditches.

The permit was issued Friday by the Pollution Control Branch (PBC) and requires the school to have a disinfectant system in place by September.

A spokesman for the PBC said the disinfectant process is a type of filtering system designed to keep environmental and health risks to a minimum. He said details of the requirement are contained in the permit, on file at 1006 Cook.

In 1981 the PBC will review the permit in light of progress taken by Saanich toward establishing a sewer system.

The PBC said in February it was prepared to overlook the faulty septic disposal system for a few years if Saanich planned sewers for the area.

Don't topple Trudeau yet, Forsey warning to Grits

OTTAWA (CP) — Any attempt to topple former prime minister Pierre Trudeau from the leadership of the Liberal party "will have a thoroughly bad effect on Quebec," says retired Senator Eugene Forsey.

"The tendency will be to say, 'there are the blankety-blank English doing the dirty on one of our boys again.' I think it would be one of the most foolish possible things for the Liberal party to try."

The 75-year-old former university professor and trade union official from Nepean, Ont., who retired from public life after nine years in the Senate, made his comments during a CTV Question Period interview.

Any move to dislodge Trudeau would open a gold mine of opportunities for Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, he added.

Forsey, a Liberal and acknowledged expert on the Constitution, said Trudeau may not be remembered in history books as a peerless prime minister, like Sir John A. MacDonald, but certainly "as one of our best."

He said that without Trudeau's guidance and leadership during the late 1960s and turbulent 1970s " the present situation with regard to Quebec would have been very much worse than it it."

He indicated that Prime Minister Clark's most hazardous test by fire will be the Quebec refendum on independence, which Levesque has promised will be held next spring.

Clark has made a good start at presenting the case for federalism through his appointment of French-Canadian cabinet ministers from the Senate and a French-speaking clerk to the Privy Council, Forsey said.

"Apart from that, the best thing he can do is to take wise counsel from people who know Quebec well and be careful to say the right things. . .not the wrong things."

Forsey he doubts there will be any major consitiutional changes in the near future.

"Any change that would be likely to have much effect might be so considerable that it would seriously weaken the central authority and I happen to have a very strong dislike for what I call the province-worshippers," he said.

"I don't think we can do much more in the way of decentralizing this country and have very much left that will be a really viable nation state."

Striking officers break up mob

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Striking policemen dropped picket signs and donned riot gear here early today, the second time in about 24 hours they have temporarily returned to their jobs to break up mobs roaming the streets of this northern New Brunswick city.

Swinging batons, they broke up crowds estimated in the thousands as the city's downtown streets became the scene for drag racing, vandalism and an impromptu nude dance. Several people were taken into custody.

Meanwhile, a crowd of about 200 angry residents gathered outside Mayor John Duffy's home demanding that a settlement be reached soon.

However, Duffy said after what he called a "horrible situation" during the first night of rioting, the city had gone as far as it could to settle with its police.

End justifies any means, RCMP told

OTTAWA (CP) — Courses given RCMP Security Service officers as late as 1972 left the clear impression that "the end justifies the means," a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing has been told.

In a 1970 induction course given at Ottawa headquarters, students were told that any evidence they obtained unlawfully is admissible in court.

Parliament itself still promotes this idea. Members two years ago repealed a wiretap law provision that made evidence inadmissble where it was gained illegally.

The justification for this is that evidence is evidence, no matter how it is gained, and if the police break the law in gaining it, they can be prosecuted later.

The fact is such prosecutions are rare.

The result may be the conclusion that an RCMP officer came to in assessing the effect of the 1970 courses that the law "could clearly be interpreted to imply that the end justifies the means."

In a 1972 course, students were asked whether it was against the law to refuse an accused persons's request to call a lawyer. The answer — "No, it was not illegal" — was based on supporting court cases.

"Our legal branch advises now that there are numerous incidents in case law where the opposite is cited — where cases of this nature were thrown out," the officer said.

Nevertheless, as late as 1972, Mounties were being taught that an arrested person had no right to call a lawyer.

After both the 1970 and 1972 courses, the officer reported, the classes were addressed by Assistant Commissioner L. R. Parent of the RCMP.

"Questions were raised as to what would happen to members caught while conducting certain types of investigations.

"Assistant Commissioner Parent's reply was to the effect that, in our work, certain chances had to be taken and if those members (class participants) were not prepared to take these chances, they should consider getting out of security service.

"It was implied here that if we were required to take certain risks to do our job, we would receive the backing of the force provided we were acting on instructions from our superiors."

And W. L. Higgitt, RCMP commissioner in 1970, suppressed an attempt by Mounties to get written guarantees of RCMP support if they were caught breaking the law in the line of duty.

When Mounties asked what would happen if they were caught putting a listenting device in a residence, they usually were told, "Don't get caught," the training officer said.

"The response always seemed to be accompanied by a smile from a speaker and a chuckle from the rest of the participants which seemed to satisfy the questioner or embarrass him from pursuing it further."

"Today the attitude has shifted sharply," the officer said. "It is emphasized . . . that, as members of security services, we will not commit illegalities in the line of duty."

The law, however, still says that evidence obtained by extortion, force or theft is admissible in Canadian courts. The RCMP has strongly resisted parliamentary efforts to make such evidence inadmissible.

Many Mounties who have testified before the McDonald commission have said that because they were under orders, it never occurred to them that what they were doing was illegal. The training officer said time-worn training methods reinforced this view.

Lawful refusal to disobey an order from a superior was not even discussed during recruit training.

"From Day 1 of basic recruit training, especially in past years, members have been programmed to react to orders from superiors on reflex, without question," the training officer said.

Turner hopes aired by MP

OTTAWA (UPC) — Liberal MP Lloyd Axworthy Saturday said former Finance Minister John Turner "would eventually" like to be Liberal leader, but Pierre Trudeau would be making a "mistake" if he resigned before the Quebec referendum.

In an interview with Standard Broadcast News, the newly-elected MP from Winnipeg said Turner has "a great deal" to offer Canadian politics, but there is a question about how his "role is to be played."

"Obviously John Turner would eventually like to be leader of the party," Axworthy said. "But at this point in time we don't know what the leadership situation will be. Mr. Trudeau has not given any intention or indication."

Axworthy, formerly the leader of the Manitoba Liberal Party before the May 22 general election, defeated Conservative hopeful and one-time provincial cabinet minister Sidney Spivak for a Commons seat. He is one of only three Liberals elected west of Ontario.

Axworthy said Trudeau will have to show leadership to regain the support of the party and the country.

Computer insurance costly for Lloyds

LONDON (Reuter) — A computer insurance scheme which went awry in the United States could leave the firm of Lloyd's with losses of up to $225 million, according to a Lloyd's spokesman.

The spokesman said in an interview that the London loss-adjusting firm of Toplis and Harding, appointed to investigate the case, had advised Lloyd's that it could face claims of up to $225 million "in the worst possible situation."

Lloyd's had underwritten a computer-leasing service in the United States, but had not fully taken into the account the possibility of a new generation of computers coming into being, the spokesman said.

"We got into this position because we have always been innovators at Lloyd's," the spokesman said. "We underwrote the first oil rigs, the first satellites and if you go far enough back in history you will find we underwrote the first steamships."

"But it is wrong to say that this will be the biggest loss in Lloyd's history," the spokesman said. "It is not the worst loss that Lloyd's has faced and the figure will not be bigger than the claims for Hurricane Betsy in 1965."

Foreign exchange mart now of age in Canada

Canadian Press

With increasing competition and sophistication, the Canadian foreign exchange market is coming of age.

In the last few years, international currency traders and foreign bank subsidiaries have moved into the market, creating a new ball game for the millions of dollars moved daily between traders.

"It's getting harder and harder to keep track of this market," a senior foreign exchange executive at a big Canadian bank said recently.

From as little as five years ago, the changes in the system constitute a revolution in the big-volume, interbank market in foreign currencies.

The heart of the market remains the Canadian Bankers Association (CBA) system for currency trading between chartered banks.

The association, a co-operative of the Canadian chartered banks, has a number of brokers transmitting orders placed by the banks and reporting the transactions to other members.

But while a few years ago the bank foreign currency traders relied almost exclusively on the CBA system, today they will also consult brokers in New York, their banks' offices in New York and Montreal and place a few calls to American banks to get the best currency price.

Further significant changes are coming. After new banking legislation passes through Parliament, 20 or more subsidiaries of foreign banks will likely become CBA members.

Canada's heavy dependence on exports makes efficient service in the foreign exchange market important. With about three-quarters of Canadian trade going to the U.S., the trade of American and Canadian dollars is a huge market.

The huge amount of investment flowing between Canada and the U.S. adds to the large volume of transactions.

And U.S. banks and European-based traders are moving in to cash on the lucrative trade in exchanging American and Canadian dollars.

The Canadian banks make foreign exchange deals with each other through the CBA system, although sometimes transactions are routed through New York agencies of the banks.

The Bank of Canada, with perhaps some recent exceptions, deals only through the CBA system, making it essential for bank traders to participate to keep tabs on what the central bank is doing.

But the association's system has its critics. They say the CBA traders have no bank experience, and complain that other banks can see what competitors are doing because information is quickly available to system members. They prefer the anonymity of the international traders.

With probably about $75 billion of foreign exchange business passing through the CBA system each year, however, its defenders can say it still works.

In addition to heating up the competition in American and Canadian currency trading, the influx of international brokers has further opened up the market for other currencies. The CBA system competes only in North American dollars.

Through the brokers, Canadian banks often do currency trading with the foreign banks, something they can't do now through the CBA system.

The exclusion of foreign banks from the CBA has led to the establishment of Canada's first foreign exchange broker, Barron Stephens Inc. of Toronto.

Its president, Barry James, says the firm will survive absorption by the CBA of the foreign bank subsidiaries after the new legislation goes through.

"We can provide a service and I am confident we will keep our longstanding relationships."

A by-product of the expanding market is a shortage of experienced currency traders. Canadian banks have been raided for staff, and the supply of new talent is shrinking.

The result for the traders is a bonanza — an expensive game of musical chairs as employers compete for their services.

Market dealings boosted

MONTREAL (CP) — Corporations relied far more on the stock market for external financing in 1978 than earlier in the decade, says the latest economic review of the Provincial Bank of Canada.

In fact, new share issues accounted for 39 per cent of funds raised in 1978, compared with only 10 per cent in 1976 and 20 per cent in 1977. As a result there was a relative decline in funds obtained through short-term bonds and bank loans.

The bank — soon to merge with the Bank Canadian National — says stock markets are recovering from the surge of inflation earlier in the decade that turned institutional and private lenders away from long-term investment.

It says recent trends also reflect a more widespread use of term financing, particularly because of the introduction of floating-rate term preferred shares, income debentures and new types of banker acceptances.

Having purchased most of these new instruments, the chartered banks increased their share in the growth of credit extended to non-financial corporations to about 75 per cent in 1978 from 50 per cent a year earlier.

Canadian stock markets are outperforming U.S. markets because of energy stability, corporate takeovers, dividend tax changes and high corporate profits, says the review.

Little chance seen for inflation break

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the prospect of a slowdown in U.S. economic activity, most Wall Street analysts see little chance of a significant letup in U.S. inflation any time soon.

For one thing, they point out, the steep increases posted recently in world oil prices will contribute heavily to inflationary pressures in the months ahead, no matter what else is going on in the economy.

"The gasoline lines may become a thing of the past, but the full impact of the oil price increases is yet to be felt," said Bernard Schoenfeld in a commentary for New York's Irving Trust Co.

"Oil imports are likely to rise from $40 billion last year to an annual rate of $60 billion (or more) by year-end," he said.

Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers said in a bulletin to portfolio managers this past week: "We may well be heading into a sort of economic and financial 'no man's land' in which stagflation dominates for a while.

"An economic contraction dominated by energy constraint will unfortunately contribute to rather than ease our inflationary problem unless it brings about a very large contraction in real growth of both energy and non-energy related activities (a development that is not yet discernible)."

Faced with such concerns, the stock market turned in an erratic performance in the four-day trading week that surrounded the July 4 holiday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.27 to 846.16 after taking a 7.12-point loss the week before.

NYSE volume averaged 33.15 million shares a day, down from 35.18 million the week before.

Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, said in a speech Friday that the increase in oil prices will probably mean inflation rates generally above 10 per cent in the industrial countries this year.

The Value Line Investment Survey, which forecasts a "mild" 1979-80 recession, observed, "Inflation will remain a serious burden throughout the recession.

"Some seasonal deceleration in the pace of inflation is quite likely in the last half of 1979. This, we think, will be attributable primarily to weakness in the food sector.

Europa target for Voyager 2 probe

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The space probe Voyager 2 today is making its closest approaches to the giant planet Jupiter and the least known of its four major moons.

The spacecraft was scheduled to get a good look at the moon Europa before a swing past Jupiter at 7:20 p.m. EDT. Europa is expected to be the star of the Voyager 2 trip because it is the one major moon that Voyager 1 did not get a good look at during its visit four months ago.

"Europa is the object we know least about and that's where the most surprises may come from," project scientist Edward Stone predicted. "That's the missing link in our knowledge of Jupiter's moons."

On Sunday, Voyager 2 examined the moon Callisto and found many bright red craters — the smallest measuring 13 to 16 kilometres across. Different colors on Callisto's surface led scientists to speculate that areas appearing blue could be ice.

Other new photographs showed that the band on Jupiter containing the huge red spot is becoming lighter, suggesting that atmospheric material such as high-altitude clouds may be increasing.

Sunday's photographs also indicated that the ring around Jupiter is probably quite narrow, more like the ring around Uranus than that of Saturn. Scientists said the ring is at least as thin as the 29-kilometre estimate based on Voyager 1 data and could be much thinner.

Dr. Brad Smith, who heads a television team for the probe at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, said that although the ring was visible, an unusual lighting effect hampered viewing as the sun shined on both the top and bottom of the ring.

Fourteen scoop $1.75M

OVIEDO, Spain (UPI) — Fourteen youths, armed with shotguns and using a stolen safe key, held up a bank today and escaped with $1,750,000.

The 14, including a young girl, rushed in with employees reporting to work at the Herreo Bank in this northern city and forced them at gunpoint to lie on the floor as they worked on the safe.

No one was injured but the holdup men fired on a armed van delivering money to the bank when the driver sounded the alarm with his siren.

During the night, the youths had forced an entry into the home of one of the cashiers who keeps one of the keys to the safe, police said.

The 14 made their getaway in three cars.

Employees said the gang had Basque accents but police told reporters this did not necessarily mean they were terrorists.

Basque separatists and ultra-left urban guerrillas have stolen millions of dollars in robberies in recent months from banks, stores and factories to finance their causes.

Killers excepted in Iran amnesty

TEHRAN (AP) — Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini announced a general amnesty today covering "all those people who committed offences under the past regime" but excluding those involved in murder or torture.

Khomeini's announcement, read over the state radio, said the measure also applied to armed forces members. He said those excluded from the amnesty were "those who have committed murder, or issued orders for murder, or those who have tortured our revolutionary prisoners."

Khomeini's regime has executed 299 men by firing squad since coming to power five months ago. Most of those executed were found guilty of murder or torture, and thousands of other suspects are believed held in prisons around the country.

Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan said two months ago that he had requested Khomeini to issue an amnesty so that "things would begin to go back to normal." Police and military officials had pressed in particular for an amnesty for their men to restore the morale of Iran's security forces.

The regime had announced July 3 that new complaints against members of the army and police for offences committed under the ousted regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi must be filed by Tuesday or they would be considered invalid.

Khomeini's amnesty announcement came on the eve of the birthday of the Imam Mehdi, an ancient Shiite Moslem patriarch whose birthday is celebrated across the country. It also followed by one day the assassination of a Khomeini supporter, the third in less than three months by an anti-clerical terrorist group.

Khomeini said he was advising the remnants of the past regime who "are still opposing the will of the nation" to give up "their useless efforts" and join the unified ranks of the country.

Early Sunday two gunmen rode up on motorcycles to the house of Khomeini supporter Haj Taghi Tarkhani, rapped on the door and when he answered shot him three times. They left leaflets saying an organization called Forghan was responsible, Interior Minister Hashem Sabaghian said.

Israelis shoot down PLO terror squad

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli army patrol intercepted a Palestinian terror squad heading for Israel and killed all three raiders in a brief firefight inside Lebanon, the military command said.

An army spokesman said there were no Israeli casualties in the Sunday shootout near the western flank of Mount Hermon, the mountain straddling the Israeli-Lebanese-Syrian frontiers.

Beirut Radio reported later that Israeli artillery opened up across the border but there were no immediate reports of casualties. Israel did not confirm the shelling.

The military command said troops searching for Palestinian commandos in southern Lebanon Sunday night blew up two homes used by guerrillas in the village of Qabrikha, eight kilometres west of the border.

A communique described the sweep as part of Israel's "deterrent action again the terrorists and their accomplices." It said the village was in a sector patrolled by Irish troops of the UN peacekeeping force but they did not interfere with the operation.

Israeli troops invaded the Arab village of Majdel Silim on Thursday night and killed two Palestinians in a gunbattle. Two others were taken prisoner and two houses were destroyed in that raid, the army said.

A communique on Sunday's firefight said the Palestinian raiders carried weapons, explosives, bullhorns and leaflets "attesting that their intention wasto take hostages and bargain for them."

Senate SALT II battle begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's top military and diplomatic officials open their defence of the embattled SALT II treaty today amid suggestions from the U.S. Senate's majority leader that some "clarifications" might be acceptable to Moscow.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Defence Secretary Harold Brown, appear before the Senate foreign relations committee today, to begin the fight for the 67 votes needed to ratify the pact.

Both contend SALT II is fair, verifiable and in the military security interests of both the U.S. and the Soviet Union. And both say that without the pact the world would be less stable; the risk of nuclear war would be greater; and arms costs would skyrocket by billions of dollars.

Returning from his mission to Moscow, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd suggested Sunday — without flatly saying so — that Soviet leaders might accept some reservations or understandings that relieve senators' concerns without radically revising the treaty text.

And he suggested the Soviets might be willing to resume the strategic arms limitation talks if such major revisions are made.

But he said it is clear that in any further talks the Russians would make new demands for U.S. concessions. He said Moscow would be sure to reopen many previously negotiated items and would refuse to confine the talks to those areas in which the Senate had asked for changes.

He said the Soviet leaders now understand the difference between amendments that change the text of the treaty and those attached to the separate resolution of ratification that expresses the Senate's views.

The hearings open with the White House and the country preoccupied with the U.S. energy crisis. But, Byrd, of West Virginia, said, "SALT is not a matter that can be put off in the corner and be covered over."

"While it may not be as dramatic as the gas lines and not as immediate," it is equally important "in terms of the long-run security of this country," he said on the CBS television program Face the Nation.

And Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho), the foreign relations committee chairman, said in remarks prepared to open the hearings that the stake the U.S. has in SALT II is very real, despite its apparent distance from "the immediate world of gas lines and high prices."

The treaty limits Soviet and U.S. long-range missiles and heavy bombers. Each side could have no more than 2,250 strategic launchers by 1985.

Without the treaty, says the administration, the U.S. would have to raise its arms spending at least $30 billion.

Walla Walla uprising

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — Some 230 prisoners slept uncovered on the ground of the "big yard" at Washington State Prison Sunday night as repair crews worked to patch up 74 cells damaged during a tense weekend uprising.

"It has been so quiet and peaceful in that yard that it's just kind of amazing," said prison spokesman Dick Paulson. "I think they've come to the evident realization that they have nothing to gain by creating any more problems."

Prisoners began clamoring for showers about 6 p.m. Saturday after three hot weeks of being locked in their cells without exercise. Four hours later they started ripping the toilets off the back walls of the mostly four-man cells and smashing through the concrete to a utility tunnel.

The huge eight-wing of the prison was emptied of its 343 inmates early Sunday morning by a Special Weapons and Tactics team. No prisoners escaped and none were injured.

GUENTHER PITCHES PERFECT GAME FOR BUDGETS

Ford, Walter capture gold

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Two Victorians won gold medals in rowing, the Budgets men's softball team scored two no-hit shutouts including one perfect game and tennis star Wendy Barlow advanced to the tennis final in women's singles play in the Pan-American Games on the weekend.

Victoria clubmates Pat Walter and Bruce Ford were winners of the double sculls as they squeezed home by one-50th of a second over the U.S. in the finals.

Budgets received gilt-edged pitching from Mark Smith and Rob Guenther in their weekend sweep.

Smith pitched a no-hitter in a 1-0 victory over Venezuela, Saturday, and Guenther did Smith one better as he pitched a perfect game Sunday in blanking the Virgin Islands 8-0.

Guenther, of Saskatoon, did not allow a runner to reach base as he struck out 17.

Budgets exploded for four runs in the third. Alden Govenlock and John Green each hit triples while Carl Walker and Bob Walton contributed doubles, Walton knocking in two runs, Walker and Green one each.

Mike Henderson singled home a run in the fourth and Benn, Guenther and Henderson all singled in the fifth as Budgets scored their final three runs.

On Saturday Smith walked only one batter. The only run of the game came when Green opened the second inning with a single and eventually scored as the Venezuelans committed three errors, the final misplay coming with the bases loaded.

Randy Benn with a double and Walton with a single got the other Budget hits.

(Meanwhile, it was announced by Budget team manager Jack Bell that club official Bert Bertoia, who suffered a heart attack earlier, now is out of intensive care and in a heart ward in hospital. It is expected that he will be able to return home with the team.)

Barlow, in advancing to the final, defeated Aluminada Concepecion of Cuba 7-5, 3-6, 6-2. It was the first time she had lost a set. Barlow will meet Maria Llamas of Mexico in the final.

One disappointment was that Nanaimo's Phil Olsen finished out of the medals in the javelin. He was fourth.

Three titles for Debbie

SURREY — Debbie Scott came up with three victories in the senior women's category at the weekend to lead a strong showing by Victoria athletes in the British Columbia track and field championships.

Scott, who competes for the University of Victoria, won the 3,000-metre event with a personal best time of nine minutes, 16.6 seconds and the 800 metres in 2:7.6 Sunday following a Saturday triumph in the 1,500 (4:19.1).

Karen Lightbody of Victoria Track Club set a provincial record while winning the 16-year-old girls' triple jump with a distance of 11.47 metres and added another victory with a leap of 5.35 metres in the long jump.

Connie Polman-Tuin of Powell River came up with an outstanding performance in the same girls' age group by winning the 100 sprint, 100 hurdles, 200 and shot put events and placing second in the long jump and discus.

Other double victories were recorded by two UVic athletes — Laura Mahoney (17-year-old girls' 100 and 200) and Craig Taylor (junior men's 100 and long jump).

Rob Lonergan of Vancouver Olympic Club was a double winner in the open men's division taking the 3,000 steeplechase Saturday in 9:07.4 and the 5,000 metres Sunday in 14:36.0.

Other Victoria winners:

Open — Brent Fougner (VTC) triple (14.76); Mike Creery 10,000 (31:27.2); Harold Willers (VTC) hammer throw (59.12).

Rowers, gymnasts add to Canada's medal list

SAN JUAN (CP) — Despite a slight hamstring injury, Diane Jones-Konihowski is favored to defend her Pan-American Games pentathlon title today and give Canada its first gold medal in track and field.

For the gold-starved Canadian track team, a victory can't come too soon. They emerged from the weekend with one silver medal and four bronze in 12 events.

While the track competition was not as lopsided as the swimming, in which the United States won 28 of 29 races, the Americans jumped into an early lead with seven victories, three of them 1-2 sweeps, to two apiece for Cuba and Mexico and one for Brazil.

Over-all, the U.S. won 72 of the 150 gold medals awarded in the first week of the Games. Cuba had 43 and Canada was a distant third with 17.

Six of those were won during the weekend, a pair by gymnasts Monica Goermann of Winnipeg and Sherry Hawco of Cambridge, Ont., in women's optional exercises, two in rowing and one each in cycling and weightlifting. The rowers also won three silvers.

And Dan Thompson of Toronto, Canada's best bet for a gold in men's swimming, was out-touched by American Bob Placak in the 100-metre butterfly, losing by one-50th of a second.

Coincidentally, the margin was identical on the rowing course when Pat Walter and Bruce Ford of Victoria nosed out an American boat in the double sculls.

Brian Dick and Tim Storm of St. Catharines, Ont., won the coxed pairs and single sculler Phil Monckton of St. Catharines, the coxed four and the eight earned silvers.

There was even more satisfaction among the Canadian women gymnasts, who finished their competition with four gold, three silver and two bronze.

Gord Singleton of Niagara Falls, Ont., who won the 1,000-metre time trial earlier in the week, gained his second cycling gold Saturday, defeating Juan Perez of Cuba in the final of the scratch sprint.

Hadlow also took silver medals in the jerk and total lift categories.

The queen of the Pan-Am pool was Cynthia Woodhead, who finished the swimming meet by winning her fourth and fifth gold medals in the 4x100-metre freestyle relay and the 100 freestyle.

The third world record of the meet fell Saturday when Mary Meagher of the U.S. won the women's 200 butterfly in two minutes 9.77 seconds.

David McCagg had a double victory Sunday night, winning the men's 100 freestyle and anchoring the U.S. team to another gold in the 4x100 medley relay.

Two defending Pan-Am champions repeated in track events, Silvio Leonard of Cuba in the men's 100 metres and Joao de Olivera of Brazil in the triple jump.

Bishop Dolegiewicz of Toronto and Bruno Pauletto of Sept-Iles, Que., took the silver and bronze behind American Dave Laut in the men's shot put, Geri Fitch of Toronto chased Jan Merrill and July Braun of the U.S. home in the women's 3,000 metres and Angela Taylor of Toronto took another bronze in the women's 100 as the top medals went to two more Americans, Evelyn Ashford and Brenda Moorehead.

Jim Rutledge edges Morgan by one stroke

Jim Rutledge of Victoria fired his second successive 69 Sunday to capture the Kamloops open golf tournament by one stroke in a duel with Uplands clubmate John Morgan and earn $1,100.

Winner of the Cowichan Open the previous weekend, Rutledge finished with a four-under-par total of 138 for the 36 holes to nip Morgan, the first-day leader who birdied the final hole.

Nelson fires birdie for playoff victory

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Larry Nelson planted a nine iron second shot two feet from the cup on the first extra hole and sank the putt for a birdie to defeat Ben Crenshaw and win the $300,000 Western Open golf tournament Sunday.

The victory was worth $54,000 to Nelson, who lost a playoff to Gil Morgan last week in the Memphis Open.

Crenshaw's second shot landed about 60 feet from the hole and his putt missed by inches.

Nelson and Crenshaw went into the sudden-death playoff after posting two-under-par 286s on the 7,097-yard par-72 Butler National course. Nelson, who started the last round with a one-stroke lead over Tom Watson, struggled in with a 39-37—76 while Crenshaw shot 37-34—71, with three birdies and a bogey on the back side.

Meanwhile, Watson, finding traps, thickets and rough, came in with a 78, matching his worst tournament round of the year. It left him at 289 along with John Schroeder, who had a 67 Sunday for the best round of the day, Mark Hayes, who shot 71, and Jim Simons, who had 72.

Bruce Devlin, the 41-year-old Australian who lives in Houston, and obscure pro Dan Pohl, 23, winner of less than $3,000 on the tour in the last two years, tied for second at 287.

Nelson's payoff increased his season total to $235,097

Four runs in the fifth inning and two in the sixth boosted Mussels over Senators.

Nick Kintz smashed a three-run homer to cap the fifth. Bob Potts started things off with a one-out single and stole second. Doug Morganti followed with a two-out single and stole second before Donny Purpura singled in Potts and set the stage for Kintz.

Potts, who also had a double during his four trips to the plate, drove in Jim Burton with a homer in the sixth.

Blues trip Stockers

VANCOUVER — Doc's Blues of Vancouver trimmed Stockers North Americans of Victoria 7-0 Sunday to win the Pacific Northwest women's softball tournament at South Memorial Park.

Blues, who were unbeaten while winning the double-loss elimination tourney, dropped Stockers into the losers' bracket with a 4-1 decision earlier the same day.

Marilyn Hickman of Stockers was named the most valuable player of the tourney after chalking up five hits in 11 trips to the plate and making several outstanding plays in left field.

Shortstop Sandy Ferguson and centrefielder Crystal Lockyer are recovering from injuries suffered when they collided while chasing a fly ball Saturday. Ferguson received 19 stitches in her scalp and Lockyer had nine stitches in her jaw.

Builders top tourney

Juan de Fuca Builders of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League downed Mulligans of Steveston 11-2 Sunday to win the Sapperton Park tournament in New Westminster.

Builders, who had dropped Mulligans into the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination affair with a 1-0 decision earlier in the day, also downed Port Coquitlam 4-3 and Big Bird Sound of North Vancouver, 2-1.

Seaboard Construction of the Stuffy League was knocked out of the tourney early after suffering losses to two New Westminster squads — Fraser Arms (2-0) and Woods Hotel (3-2).

In regular Stuffy League play Sunday, Strandlund Brothers edged Tally-Ho Inn 6-5 in 10 innings after the latter club had recorded a 3-2 victory in the opener of the doubleheader at Central Park.

In Port Angeles, Port Angeles Telecable tripped Labatts 5-1 and 9-5 Saturday after splitting a doubleheader against Elks-Athletics, winning 5-2 and losing 5-1, on Saturday.

Ken Dryden makes retirement official

MONTREAL (CP) — Ken Dryden, the 31-year-old all-star goaltender with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, announced today he is retiring from professional hockey.

Dryden, who had indicated a year ago that he wanted to move on to other things, had delayed making his retirement official at the request of Canadiens' management.

Winner of the Vezina Trophy, along with clubmate Michel Larocque as best goaltenders in the league for the last three seasons, Dryden earlier sat out the 1973-74 season while he articled with a law firm in Toronto.

He said retiring was "a lot easier yesterday than it is today."

Ridley schoolboy champions

HENLEY ON THAMES (Reuter) — Ridley College of St. Catharines, Ont., captured the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup for schoolboy eights with a decisive victory over Eton College in Sunday's final at the Henley Royal Regatta.

Ridley won by 2¾ lengths over the English crew.

It was the fifth win in seven attempts in recent years for the schoolboys from St. Catharines, who missed out last year after winning in 1975 and 1977.

In another final, the British National eight kept the historic Grand Challenge Cup with a powerful win over Yale University.

Ball leads 'Caps

Times News Services

Alan Ball gave Vancouver's sputtering offence a shot in the arm by scoring two goals as the Whitecaps broke a two-game losing streak by defeating Seattle Sounders 3-1 at Vancouver's Empire Stadium Saturday night in a North American Soccer League game.

Ball, acquired recently from Philadelphia Fury, scored his third penalty goal in five games during the opening half and got the insurance score in the last half after Seattle had closed to within one goal.

Trevor Whymark, normally a striker but playing the backline because of injuries, got the other Vancouver goal, while versatile John Ryan scored for the Sounders.

The win moved Vancouver back into first place in the Western Division of the National Conference, seven points ahead of Los Angeles Aztecs, who lost 2-1 in overtime at San Diego to the Sockers.

The Whitecaps got a break early in the game when Seattle midfielder Alan Hudson was called for a hand ball in the penalty area and Ball converted the penalty kick at 8:35.

Whymark was denied a goal by Seattle defender Adrian Webster off a header from a corner kick, but scored moments later at 42:05 when he headed in a cross from Ray Lewington.

Ball had a second penalty kick at 51:23 of the second half after Hector was brought down in the penalty area by Ryan, but Ivanow made a diving save.

Playoff victory

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Hollis Stacy sank a one-foot putt for par on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday with Judy Rankin and Laura Baugh to win a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Rankin, who won here in 1977, dropped from the playoff on the first extra hole and Baugh took a bogey on the second extra hole.

Mike's bat booms

By The Associated Press

Suddenly, Mike Schmidt's bat is back on the launching pad.

Philadelphia's powerful third baseman, all but overshadowed most of the season by Chicago's Dave Kingman, hit his 28th home run of the season Sunday — one shy of Kingman's major league-leading figure — and his fifth in the last three games.

The two-run blast in the sixth inning, a mammoth opposite-field shot that cleared the right-centre field fence, enabled the Phillies to tie San Francisco. Then Pete Rose's single in the seventh broke the tie and led the way to a 5-3 victory over the Giants.

In the rest of the National League, Chicago (minus the injured Kingman) pounded Houston 10-0, Los Angeles outlasted Montreal 8-6, Atlanta trimmed St. Louis 6-5 and, in a pair of doubleheader splits, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 4-2, then lost 2-1, and San Diego defeated New York 5-3, then lost 4-1.

On Saturday, Chicago took a pair from Houston, 6-0 and 8-3, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 6-2, Montreal edged Los Angeles 2-1, Atlanta whipped St. Louis 10-2, San Diego bombed New York 11-3 and San Francisco defeated Philadelphia 8-6

Schmidt's five home runs in three games — three of them on Saturday — came within one of the record of six he already shares with Tony Lazzeri, Gus Zernial, Lee May, Frank Thomas and Ralph Kiner.

The three in Saturday night's 8-6 loss were nice, he said, but the oneon Sunday was nicer because it helped the Phillies win.

Meanwhile in the American League, Boston Red Sox clubbed four home runs — two by Carlton Fisk — in their 8-2 rout of the Mariners.

In the other games, Ben Oglivie powered Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-4, 3-1 doubleheader sweep of Detroit Tigers, New York Yankees rode Luis Tiant's one-hitter to a 2-0 triumph over Oakland A's, Texas Rangers edged Toronto Blue Jays 4-3, Chicago White Sox beat Kansas City Royals 4-2 and Minnesota Twins beat Cleveland Indians 7-2 after losing 5-4 in the opener of their doubleheader.

Eclipse winner

SANDOWN, England (Reuter) — Irish-trained colt Dickens Hill won the [illegible] Stakes over one and a quarter miles Saturday. Crimyon Beau was second.

Athletics pad streak

Victoria Athletics extended an unbeaten streak to 11 games by downing G & W Landscaping 18-10 in one of two Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League games Sunday at Pearkes Arena.

Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal evened its record at 5-5 by defeating Saanich Metro Honda 21-10 in the other contest.

Dawyne Ferguson scored five goals and added three assists while Bill Merechek added three goals and six assists for Athletics.

Another Dixon century

Keith Dixon came up with his second century of the season Saturday to set the pace as Albion downed Saanich by 62 runs in the only league match of the weekend in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Dixon scored 105 runs, not out, as Albion batted first and reached 205 for seven wickets. Malcolm Shanks added 23.

Saanich could only manage 143 all out as Dave Tozer counted 52 and John Newton added 36.

Don Hughes (four for 45) and Shanks (three for 37) were the top Albion bowlers.

In 40-overs matches, Albion topped Cowichan by eight wickets at Shawnigan Lake and Oak Bay downed Castaways by 55 runs at Beacon Hill Park on Sunday while Alcos tripped Incogs by three wickets on Saturday.

WHISTLER, B.C. (CP) — Paul Tettamanti, 20, of Vancouver won the gruelling 248-kilometre West Vancouver-Whistler Mountain bicycle road race Sunday.

Dawn brightest in junior tests

Dawn, an 18-year-old from Cowichan who holds the provincial junior women's golf crown, started her happy weekend Saturday by carding a six-over-par 80 on the Victoria Golf Club links to earn over-all honors in the District One junior women's championship tournament.

On Sunday, the scene shifted to the demanding Royal Colwood course for the Vancouver Island junior championship and Coe turned in another sparkling effort. This time the six-handicapper posted a four-over 78 in a remarkably-consistent round to wrap up the Island title with an eight-stroke margin over Nancy Callan, a tall 14-year-old from the Uplands course.

Callan, who last week qualified for the world junior tournament with a playoff victory in Vancouver, also finished second in Saturday's District test. Nancy notched an 84 to finish one shot in front of Jill Johnson, the Salt Spring Islander who last season won the Victoria and Island crowns.

That one stroke was enough to give Callan the District title since Coe resides outside the district boundaries and had to settle for the over-all award.

Megan Moore (87) of Gorge Vale was fourth, followed by Janine Getty (88) of Vancouver.

Pam Simpson of Glen Meadows was the handicap leader with 90-21—69 as Sheelagh Lean of Colwood took runner-up honors with 90-19—71.

On Sunday, Getty finished third in the Island championship chase, two shots nehind Callan with an 88.

Joli Prezslenyi of Beach Grove wound up as the handicap winner with 91-19—74, followed by Cowichan's Jill Hutchison (97-22—75) and Lean (96-19—77).

Vancouver Island, represented by Coe, Callan, Hutchison and Lean, captured the Marilyn Palmer Trophy in team handicap competiton against the Mainland.

Individual scores in the two weekend tournaments count in the six rounds used for selection of the provincial junior team.

Ferrill, who was named the top pitcher and captured most-valuable-player honors, threw a four-hitter in the final game as Pirates came through the losers' bracket to defeat Campbell River Scamps, 14-2.

Head aids champ

Arguello's head also played a part in the outcome. A collision of heads left Limon with a cut above the right eyebrow in the first round and Limon came away from another collision of heads in the fifth with a cut on his right cheek.

The scheduled 15-rounder was the first Sunday fight show in New York history.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand-prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

The older the better: Muncey, 50, wins 54th

MADISON, Ind. (AP) — Defending champion Bill Muncey outdistanced rookie Steve Reynolds on Sunday to win the American Power Boat Association's Gold Cup race for unlimited hydroplanes for an unprecedented eighth time.

It was Muncey's third straight victory in the Gold Cup race, the APBA's premier event, and his 54th career victory.

No other driver in the history of the sport has won more than 20 races, and only one other driver has ever won the Gold Cup three years in a row.

"I think this proves decisively that older is better," joked the 50-year-old Muncey, of LaMesa, Calif., who has won all four races on the APBA circuit this season.

Third place went to the Squire Shop, driven by Chip Hanauer, of Seattle, Wash.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

Opening lead — five of diamonds.

This famous hand was played by Ewart Kempson, British star, many years ago. He got to six hearts and West led a diamond. When dummy appeared, it seemed practically certain to declarer that he would eventually make the slam.

But after winning the diamond with the queen and playing a trump to the ace, West showing out, Kempson discovered that he would have to lose not only a trump trick but also, almost surely, a club trick.

Never one to give up easily, Kempson proceeded to make the slam anyhow. He executed an extremely rare type of endplay. He cashed the A-K of spades, led a heart to dummy's king, and ruffed a spade.

Kempson now cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed the king in dummy. Next came a trump to the queen, producing this position:

North
♠7
♣Q 9 3

West
♠Q
♣J 8 5

East
♡J
♣K 7 2

South
♡8
♣A 10 6

Kempson led the trump eight and West, who could not afford to part with the queen of spades, discarded the five of clubs. Dummy now discarded the seven of spades and East, compelled to win the trump trick, had to return a club.

It did not matter which club East played at this point. Actually, he returned the deuce of clubs, South playing the six, West the jack and dummy the queen. Kempson now took the obvious club finesse and it was all over. It would not have helped West to play the eight of clubs instead of the jack. Declarer would win in dummy with the nine and return the queen to put an end to the matter.

Longden 6000 to Skovinsky

Times News Services

R.J. Bennett's 5-year-old gelding Skovinsky won his first race in two years Saturday when he scored an upset seven-length victory in the $16,350 Longden 6,000 at Vancouver's Exhibition Park.

The lightweight in the field of six, Skovinsky carried only 110 pounds and ran the one and one-eighth miles in 1:48 3/5, one-fifth of a second off the track record.

Ridden by Danny Williams Skovinsky paid $13.80, 7.30 and 3.50.

It was the third winner of the card for Williams who recently returned to the saddle after sitting out six weeks with a broken collarbone suffered in a spill.

At Hollywood Park, the word was: Sandy Hawley's back.

The Canadian jockey, back after a stint at Toronto's Woodbine, took Prize Spot from far back and then won a stretch duel with favored It's in the Air to capture Saturday's running of the $108,300 Hollywood Oaks for three-year-old fillies.

At New York's Belmont, Coastal, the upset winner of the Belmont Stakes last month, easily won the $106,400 Dwyer Stakes in his first start since thwarting Spectacular Bid's hopes of sweeping the Triple Crown.

Carrying top weight of 126 pounds under the allowance conditions of the race, the three-year-old son of Majestic Prince was ridden by Ruben Hernandez. He set a stakes record of 1:47 for the 1⅛-mile test in scoring his fifth straight victory.

Screen King, an also-ran in the Triple Crown races this year, won the $108,400 Omaha Gold Cup in a 1:44 2-5 trip over the 1 1-16-mile route at Ak-Sar-Ben.

At Woodbine, Bo-Teek Farms' Avenare upset 2-to-5 favorite Solartic to win the $30,000 Shady Wells Stakes Sunday.

B.C. Classy certainly was in winning second 'cap

"Classy" was again the word at Sandown Raceway Saturday.

For the second straight week the four-year old bay gelding B.C. Classy captured the featured ninth pace, an $1,800 Invitational Handicap, but this time with a different diver in the sulky.

And that may have been the reason the punters didn't believe.

For B.C. Classy, which had scored last week over Billie Barker, Andys Janice and others with leading driver Keith Linton at the controls, this time surprisingly got off at slightly better than 8-1 with Keith Clark from Calgary doing the honors.

And for B.C. Classy, owned, trained and most often driven by Doug Ferguson, it was a smasher as he held off the fast-closing Andys Janice and in a lifetime best time of 2:01.4 just two ticks off the track record.

Clark was in town because the annual Calgary Stampede has taken over from the harness meet there.

B.C. Classy, in scoring his fifth win of the season, returned $18.90, $8.70 and $3.90 and combined with Andys Janice for a healthy $74 Exactor.

Andys Peyton was third, just missing the place.

Continuing what has been the pattern, the fast track contributed to four other lifetime bests on Saturday.

Etawah Hank ($3.90), driven by Keith Linton, ran the mile in 2:03 in the eighth; Howler ($15.80), with Lyle McDole in the sulky, registered 2:04.1 in the seventh; O Promise Me ($15.00), driven by Carl Sibiga, hit 2:06.2 in the fifth and Senga Queenhope ($15.90) won in 2:06.3 in the second.

In addition, Flight Stream equalled his best with a 2:05.3 clocking in the sixth. McDole was the only driver with two winners, also getting Mel J Victor ($8.40) home in the 10th.

Saturday's crowd was 1,801 and the handle $129,510, which is the third highest in the two years the standardbreds have been running here.

Total for the 29 days of the meeting is $2,754,881.

Bottlers undefeated

Goodwill Bottlers finished their season in unbeaten fashion Sunday by hammering Richmond, the team they meet in the semi-finals, 18-3 at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Mike Thomas led the rout with five goals as Bottlers collected the league title with an 11-0-3 record.

Paul Pynn and John Crowther, who also had four assists, each added three goals and Vince Cullen contributed two.

On Saturday, Bottlers played to a 10-10 deadlock with Burnaby. Jim Lightbody scored three goals to lead Bottlers while Crowther and Thomas scored two apiece.

Dates and times for the playoff schedule still have to be finalized.

Caterpillar V Series Lift Trucks give you a lot more than muscle.

They're among the biggest lift trucks Caterpillar makes. But they're not just weight lifters. These machines are built tough from the chassis up to deliver high production, with low maintenance costs shift after shift, year after year.

Whether you need the 10,000 lb. (5,000 kg.) capacity Cat V-100 or the 30,000 lb. (14,000 kg.) payload of the top of the line V-300, you'll get fast cycles, all-terrain traction, nimble maneuverability and swift acceleration. The operator's controls are conveniently located, and visibility is excellent.

Equipped with either standard forks or customized clamps and grapples, these heavy duty Caterpillar lift trucks will shift logs or lumber, newsprint rolls or pulp bales, concrete pipe or construction steel; and they'll perform as profitably whether they're on a concrete pier, a paved yard or in a rough work area.

Choose one of nine Caterpillar V Series models, then match the engine and transmission to your job needs. Depending on the model, we'll fit a husky Cat 3208 diesel, a Perkins 4.236 diesel, or a Ford 351 gas engine with manual transmission or power shift.

When muscle alone isn't enough, specify a Cat V Series Lift Truck. It's backed by CAT PLUS services at 51 Finning locations throughout British Columbia, the Yukon and the Mackenzie Valley, N.W.T.

Eagles earn hockey titles

Dave Hood scored seven of his team's 11 goals as the Eagles compiled a 6-0 record in the Little League tournament at Lansdowne while the Esquimalt juniors went unbeaten through three games in their event.

Trophy winners were: Ian Farmer, Oak Bay, Emil Belldgens Trophy, Little League; Gordon Mosley, Ranjit Sidhu Trophy, Junior League; Peter Bourne, Rick Eison Trophy, Senior League.

Couples grabs title with sizzling finish

VANCOUVER — Saving his best effort for the home stretch, Fred Couples of Seattle charged from behind with a four-under-par 67 Saturday to capture the British Columbia amateur golf championship.

Winner of both the Washington State open and amateur crowns last year, the 19-year-old university student finished with a seven-under 277 total at the 6,089-yard Marine Drive course.

His 67 was the best round of the 72-hole tournament and was enough to lift him past defending-champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver, the third-round leader. Roxburgh was seeking his fourth consecutive B.C. crown, but could do no better than 73 to finish third at 282.

Brent Murray of Portland, runner-up last year to Roxburgh, finished second again, this time three strokes behind Couples. Murray had a 69 Saturday for 280.

Steve Berry of Vancouver wound up fourth at 284 after a final-round 73, while Lanny Sawchuk of Victoria was another stroke back after firing a 69.

Sandy Harper of Nanaimo, posting a final-round 77 for 293, was the only other Vancouver Island player among the top 20 contestants.

Couples, who went into the final round trailing Roxburgh by one stroke, pulled away from both Roxburgh and Murray when he fired five birdies in one seven-hole stretch, the eighth through 14th.

Ontario wins junior crown

FREDERICTON, N.B. — Ontario won the Canadian junior rugby championship Sunday with a 15-6 victory over three-time champion British Columbia.

Brett Hennensent collected seven points for Ontario with a penalty goal and conversions of tries scored by Chris Rhora and Mark Nein.

The teams were tied 3-3 at the half before a faltering B.C. defence allowed Ontario backs to dash for long runs.

In a playoff for third place, Alberta swamped Saskatchewan 66-6.

Manitoba edged Quebec 11-9 for fifth place. New Brunswick downed Prince Edward Island 20-3 for seventh place. Newfoundland defeated Nova Scotia 34-14 to take ninth place.

Durrance: His life changed

Weapons in hand, these hunters hike up a hill . . .

. . . and enjoy a rest and view from the top

He may have been a head hunter

Now he's a man with a mission

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

There was a day when David Durrance hustled to make a buck

He worked as a teacher and built homes as a sideline.

He's now a man with a mission and lives with the mountain people of the northern Philippines — many of whom were headhunters as recently as 1970 — in an effort to raise their living standards.

He's back in Victoria working as a roofer but not for himself. His concern now is to earn money for his overseas neighbors.

Durrance's driving interest in the mountain people began in 1973 when he was on a world tour and staying at a hostel at Sagada in the northern Philippines.

There he met two Anglican sisters who asked him to sponsor a girl called Petra Angpao who wanted to be a nurse.

"She was raised by the Holy Child Orphanage and would have to go on back to the woods if someone couldn't help her," he said.

Durrance agreed to sponsor Petra and later received a letter saying that Petra's old grandparents were dying and wanted to see her sponsor.

He went to Petra's barrio (village) and what he saw changed his life.

The children were dirty and many were suffering from malnutrition, internal parasites, scabies and eye infections.

Families of between eight to 10 slept together on bare wooden floors without bed mats or blankets. There were no tables. The people sat on their haunches to eat.

Durrance's first meal was tadpoles and rice.

He says conditions in the other barrios scattered around Sagada — a town of about 2,000 people — are the same.

With Durrance sponsoring her, Petra has completed two years of university and four years in St. Ann's Hospital's school of nursing at Manila and has now joined Durrance in his campaign to help her people.

For the past 2½ years, Durrance has also sponosored an agricultural student, Danny Gonoyan, who comes from the same barrio as Petra.

But Durrance's involvment has become much deeper.

In January, 1978, he leased a building in Sagada for 100 pesos ($13 to $14) a month which he uses as his headquarters and home.

And when he returns in mid-September he hopes, with Petra's help, to set up a medical clinic.

His first concern was to try to improve the people's diet. He tells how children will spend half a day catching beetles for food. The legs and wings are taken off and the remainder cooked.

"I'm trying to introduce new crops," he says, adding that watermelon seeds were the first things he planted.

Next he brought in 6,000 seedlings ranging from orange and coconut to coffee and calamnsi, a small green lemon-like fruit that is rich in vitamin C.

In July, 1978, he formed the International Association for the Transformation of Man, a Canadian-registered charitable organization which he hopes will produce both funds and help for his adopted people.

In a barrio, if a school exists, it usually goes only to Grade 4 and he knows of one such school which has only three teachers to cope with up to 370 children. It has no equipment, not even a blackboard.

Durrance says for $15 a month, people can sponsor a child so that he or she can leave their barrio and further their education.

He tells of three children he and Danny took on their first bus ride to Sagada. "They wanted us to look at the trees running by," he recalls.

The youngsters wolfed down the first half then dashed outside.

"Just like a dog burying a bone they were looking for somewhere to hide the other half for later," he says.

Durrance said his main goal now is to fund his agency.

"If its name means anything, it is to become more human, more sharing, more compassionate human beings," he says.

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

If the sky falls, we shall catch larks.

Had the French writer Rabelais ever envisaged an 80-ton Skylab tumbling from the heavens, he probably wouldn't have waxed lyrical about falling objects.

The Spaniards took Rabelais' proverb and altered it slightly. "If the sky falls, the pots will be broken."

Theirs was a much more practical approach, but their concern for broken crockery would have proven unwarranted as far as Skylab goes.

According to Victoria insurance agents, any loss caused by a falling Skylab or parts thereof will be covered by any typical home insurance policy, specifically the clause which guards against "any object, which, while falling," strikes the outside of a building, be it house or skyscraper.

That's the word after the Times asked insurance agents today if they had received any calls regarding the possibility of Skylab or a piece of Skylab skewering their homes.

Allan Tolsma, an independent agent, said he hadn't had a single call on the matter.

The latest prediction — and they're changing almost hourly — calls for chunks of the U.S. spacecraft to fall somewhere in Australia at 9:10 a.m. Wednesday. However, you can go 15 hours either way from that estimate, which means Skylab still could fall pretty much anywhere along its flight path — including Victoria.

Tosma said any damage caused by Skylab would be covered by the standard clause in most policies.

"But if that piece of material were radioactive," he mused, "it probably wouldn't be covered because that would come under another section covering radioactivity and wars and such." But Tolsma couldn't be sure.

Over at Westcoast Savings Insurance, manager Frank Lane agreed that regular policies would cover any Skylab damage and he too felt that radioactive contamination would probably be excluded.

He said his office had received five calls about Skylab, all of them customers merely asking if their homes were insured against falling space vehicles.

Where can radioactive coverage be bought?

Lane think there is some federal government agency to provide protection.

"Why don't you check with Jim Eisler over at Coast Claims? He's one of the best adjusters in the business," said Lane.

Eisler suggested the radioactivity problem could probably be covered by an endorsement to an existing policy.

But, he said, "Radioactivity, much like war risks, is generally considered to be a problem of government, not of private insurance companies."

What if someone is killed by a piece of Skylab?

If you're covered by life insurance, Kevin McLaughlin of Canada Life Assurance says most insurance policies would pay off, without any special endorsements.

Edmund "Woody" Woodward, vice-president of Harboard Insurance, said his firm has had instructions from five or six persons to get Lloyd's of London coverage against the possibility of being struck by Skylab.

Search continues for hiker

Donnanm Peppar, 39, of Vancouver, described as an inexperienced hiker, became separated from 11 other persons.

Also taking part in the search are staff members of the Strathcona Provincial Park, the Strathcona Lodge and an an RCMP helicopter.

Peppar's party left Comox Glacier on July 1 and was headed for Flower Ridge in Strathcona Park.

The missing man is warmly-clad but it is not known what provisions he may have with him.

Inquiry ordered in school rift

A special fact-finding commission to investigate a hiring dispute at St. Joseph's Catholic School has been appointed by Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo.

Bishop De Roo said today he appointed the commission because it appears the rift between the school board, teachers and parents is worsening.

"It has become apparent the item cannot be resolved locally without further difficulties and polarization."

In a letter to school board chairman Emily Hudson dated July 6, Bishop De Roo said continued public attention also prompted his move.

Hudson, who last week denied the existence of any serious problems at the school, said today she has no comment on the Bishop's decision.

The commission will interview people it feels can contribute to the solution, the letter said.

It will also receive all written statements and compile a complete dossier.

At the end of the investigation, recommendations will be made to the executive of the Catholic Public Schools of Victoria Diocese (CPSVD).

De Roo is president of the CPSVD.

The commission will be chaired by Rev. W.H. Bulloch, a retired teacher and pastor.

Other members are Louise Griffin of St. Patrick's parish, Oak Bay; Dorothy Comerford of Queen of Peace parish, Esquimalt, and Dr. Jean-Paul Vinay, retired University of Victoria dean and member of St. Jean-Baptiste parish, Victoria.

Dr. Gerald Ricard, administrative assistant to Education Minister Pat McGeer, will act as advisor to the commission.

Heaton said he was resigning because the school board refused to renew the contracts of two teachers after assuring him all teachers would be rehired in September.

But he also said the board was interfering in the running of the school and that morale was low and bound to get even lower in September.

Whelda Steeves, president of the parents association, said a power struggle between Heaton and the board was affecting the school. She said parents were shocked at Heaton's resignation and wanted some answers.

Three board members, including former chairman Henny Voorsluys, resigned over the issue.

Heaton asked Bishop De Roo to investigate the power structure of the parish-elected boards. He said one board for the entire district would be much more objective than a series of small, locally elected boards.

Bishop De Roo said last week he would rather wait and see if the board could resolve its differences before stepping in.

He said that Catholic school boards were suffering "growing pains" under the new Independent Schools Act, which imposes a degree of uniformity never before experienced.

Under the act, independent schools are entitled to a maximum of approximately $450 per student annually if they conform to standards imposed by the education ministry.

At last, the missing masks come home

MIDWAY THROUGH LAST friday afternoon, history repeated itself for the Cape Mudge band of the Kwakiutl Nation. We watched a boat edge in toward the village beach. Its after-section was crammed with visiting Indian dignitaries dress in their finest ceremonial bib and tucker. They danced. From a vatage-point on the foreshore, while drums throbbed behind him, James Sewid welcomed the guests to a feast-day.

We were aware, of course, of differences between that scene and the visitations of long ago.

Under his ornate button-blanket of red and blue stroud, Jimmy Sewid wore slacks and a white shirt. Nor was the occasion the coming of a son to manhood or the giving of a chief's daughter in marriage. It was to mark the opening of the very fine Kwakiutl Museum in which are displayed masks and other artifacts returned by Ottawa to the band after a lapse of 57 years.

It was plain to us that this was a great day for the Cape Mudge Kwakiutl. The mood was festive. What had been launched as an invitation-only celebration by the band's Nuyumbalees Society (meaning: "the beginning of all legends") was expanded in a gesture of typically lavish Indian hospitality to come-one-come-all.

Before we crossed Discovery Passage from Campbell River to the Quadra island village, Win and I were asked not to bring our car. Buses would be laid on for the run from ferry wharf to village. Also, we were bidden not to bring food.

With reason. The Cape Mudge people, schooled by centuries of experience, are superlatively good at feasting the visitor.

For dinner, barbecued salmon fresh-caught by the band's troller fleet. Also, excellent clam chowder, turkey with stuffing and cranberry sauce, salads in several varieties, baked potatoes and rolls . . . a collation fit to bend the cardboard plates on which it was served. Four shiny coffee urns and a huge cake with the museum pictured on its icing took care of the later courses.

All this was free, offered in accordance with the Kwakiutl philosophy which Sewid stated gravely — though with the suggestion of a twinkle — to the diners.

"We would look on it as a shame to us to invite you people to visit us," he said, "then to charge you for your food."

The ceremonies began with morning service in Walker Memorial United Church, named for an early pastor of a religious community which has served the village for more than 100 years. Then came the welcoming of guests and traditional dances in a community hall fronted by a large-scale painting of the Tsisiutl, or two-headed serpent of native mythology.

One of these dances, incidentally, deserves a far wider showing than it has so far received. In it, the animal kingdom, splendidly masked and costumed, passes in review before a charmed human watcher.

Then to the museum for a final ceremony before the sea snail-shaped building was declared open.

A succession of visiting chiefs — Nimpkish, Nootka, Squamish and others — spoke, or rather orated in the manner dear to the Indian heart.

The white man came in for a shrewd dig or two. Disappointingly, by no means all of the artifacts seized by the federal government in 1922 as part of its anti-potlatch clampdown had been returned. The band would welcome the rest back.

But past was past, various speakers concluded. We were all friends on this day, and all welcome.

To conclude, a girl in ceremonial dress was held "prisoner" within a square of red cedar bark strips gripped by elders of the band. Only after proper ritual could she be set free.

With the gift of cedar barks for luck, we were then passed into the museum.

The soaring totem pole in its two-storey well, carved by Sam Henderson and his gifted sons, was new. But the pair of welcome figures set against an impressive backdrip just inside the door were familiar. Those poles had until very recently guarded the portals of Campbell River Museum's notably fine Indian room. In a hands-across-the-water gesture, they had been restored to Cape Mudge, their ancestral home.

Certainly the welcome they suggest couldn't have been warmer. We came home with our lucky cedar bark, well-stuffed and feeling that we'd been to a bang-up party.

Pair safe in sinking

A man and his wife were rescued unharmed when their 12-metre fishing vessel, the Silver Foam, sank early Sunday near Cape Lazo off the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Lights off, lights on

The lights went out in Saanich briefly this morning when a construction truck hit a power pole near Borden and MacKenzie, but B.C. Hydro had them back on again in less than an hour.

Apartments still scarce

Apartment units continue to be a scarce commodity in the Victoria area although the supply situation has eased a bit, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation reported today.

The vacancy rate is 1.7 per cent, up from 1.1 per cent in October, CMHC said.

The corporation has stated that a vacancy rate of 3 to 4 four per cent is an ideal balance of supply and demand.

The latest survey, conducted in April, showed there were 19,671 occupied apartments out of a total supply of 20,006. This compares with 19,512 occupied units out of 19,720 in October.

This showed that both the supply and demand had increased during the past six months, although the demand was growing at a slower rate.

An additional 463 apartment rental units were under construction in April.

In detail, the survey showed the Victoria city vacancy rate is 1.9 per cent, up from 1.2 per cent. The rate is almost nil in the Cook Street area, is 1.3 per cent in James Bay and 1.9 along Fort St.

It is nil in Sidney, almost nil in Oak Bay, 1.2 in Saanich and nil in Central Saanich. The only municipality with a signficant vacancy rate is Esquimalt at 2.2 per cent and that is below what the CMHC regards as a stable supply-demand level.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

The headaches for which I occasionally take aspirin are made worse by the bombardment of television commercials about special kinds of aspirin. "Super strength, double strength, extra strength!" That's all we hear. My head bounces from side to side like a ping-pong ball. What's this all about? — Mrs. R.R.

DEAR MRS. R.:

Aspirin is aspirin is aspirin (apologies to the poet, Gertrude Stein). All aspirin made by reliable manufacturers is the same. The wide disparity in the cost of aspirin must therefore be attributed to the packaging, advertising and overhead costs, not to the quality of the aspiring.

Aspirin, or salicylic acid, is universally accepted as a valuable and effective drug when used judiciously. There are some instances when the use of aspirin is not advised. People prone to peptic ulcers of the stomach or the duodenum defintely should not take aspirin without medical advice. Those who are known to be allergic to the drug must avoid it. Aspirin is not commonly used post-operatively because it tends to increase the possibility of bleeding.

There is no such thing as "extra strength" or "super-strength" aspirin, in the sense that most people think of these expressions. Five grains of aspirin is the size of the average tablet of aspirin that we are all familiar with. Now, it stands to reason that if the manufacturer is going to increase the amount of aspirin in each tablet it will, of course, in that sense be "stronger" than five grains of aspirin.

But there is no intrinsic difference in the aspirin itself. In other words, you can take two ordinary five-grain aspirin tablets and get the same effect as taking a "super-strength" 10-grain tablet.

While on the subject of aspirin, I'd like to call attention to parents who sometimes tend to suggest to their children that good-tasting aspirin is "candy," in order to get them to willingly take it. Children implanted with such an idea are the ones who are later tempted to help themselves to such "candy," with dire results. One of the great contributions that parents can make is to teach children that medicine is medicine and the choice is not theirs whether it should be taken or not. Children who are trained in this way make surprisingly little fuss about taking medicine and do not need the special inducement of the taste of "candy."

SWIMMERS ALL are the three members of Moscow's Zola family — papa, three-year-old Kolya, and nine-months-old Nadya — having a workout in one of the pools reserved for young children. Russian researchers believe that teaching tots to swim before they can walk increases the children's immunity to colds and disease.

Wine 'washes away the years'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A little wine is just what the doctor should order for healthy senior citizens in need of a physical perking up, a Massachussetts psychologist says.

Dr. Robert Kastenbaum, superintendent of Cushing Hospital near Boston, introduced wine as a type of "self-medication" to groups of people over 65. He found "it was like washing away years of old age.

"Many of the problems associated with age — fatigue, loss of memory, disturbed sleep, lack of energy — could be alleviated with a limited use of wine," Kastenbaum said in an interview.

Concerned about the quantity of "mood drugs" used in nursing homes and geriatric hospitals, Kastenbaum in the 1960s began researching the effects of wine on the elderly.

"It seemed strange to use drugs to relax old people. I thought if I wanted to change my mood, I'd take a drink. So, why couldn't an older person?" the psychologist said. "It seemed almost as though the elderly were treated as a separate group from the rest of mankind."

He introduced wine to a control group of 40 men in their 70s at Cushing Hospital to study its social and physical implications. The average age of the more than 600 patients at the hospital was 80.

"The results were beyond what I hoped for," he said. "These men, who had felt abandoned and useless for years, sat around the table participating in the ritual of opening up a bottle, then slowly sipping the savory drink. It brought back memories, it gave them a sense of community. For the first time they became a solid group."

As the experiment expanded to other parts of the hospital, Kastenbaum noticed other changes:

"The families started visiting more often. The staff actually began to spend their lunch breaks with the patients, whose individual personalities had began to come out more. They all began to appreciate each other. Wine became a symbol of feeling young and being together."

The wine was prescribed in limited amounts by a patient's physician. It lessened the need for "mood-affecting drugs, such as relaxants," Kastenbaum said.

Why not a year off to get set to retire?

How would you like to get a full year off from your job every seven years — with pay?

That is the suggestion of Dr. J. C. Brocklehurst, Professor of Geriatric Medicine, University of Manchester, England, as a way to prepare for our senior years. (Dr. Brocklehurst currently is Visiting Professor and Chairman of the Division of Geriatric Medicine, University of Saskatchewan.)

"It is 100 to one against anyone being able to develop a satisfying second career if he or she starts only on their 65th birthday," he said.

"Interest and attitude, skill and understanding must be developed long before and be growing — perhaps in a small way but nevertheless in a real and positive way — from middle life or even before."

In Toronto recently, Dr. Brocklehurst expanded on his views at a seminar on "Successful Aging," organized and underwritten by General Foods Limited, with CBC's Roy Bonisteel as moderator. Also contributing to this international forum were Dr. Virginia Stone, Duke University, North Carolina, and Dr. Cope Schwenger, University of Toronto.

"It is a matter of pre-retirement preparation," Dr. Brocklehurst emphasized. "Science and medicine have given us the bonus years by improved nutrition, prevention of infection and treatment of illness. Now it is up to education to properly prepare people for their fulfillment.

"Why should we not have sabbatical years for everyone? Perhaps it would be better for all workers to have one year off in seven, to travel, to study, to develop our interests for future years, rather than move to a four-day week or bring the retirement age down to 60 or see unemployment increase.

"It seems to me that with increasing automation and production of wealth by machines rather than by men, one of these things must come about before the present century is complete."

Dr. Brocklehurst would choose the sabbatical alternative over all others as an ideal way to prepare for your "bonus years," for continuing education throughout life.

Second careers need not be paid employment; it is more important that they be in creative, exciting or service-giving activities.

"How many people," he asked, "have spent their regular working lives in activity that is dull, repetitive and monotonous — and have dreamed of things they would really like to be doing but couldn't?

"These things I believe are the purposes of the bonus years: To use our skills as craftsmen, artists and creators; to absorb ourselves in music, biography, history; to grow prize chrysanthemums; to work for others as volunteers.

"If the best is yet to be, as Browning put it, we must take steps to bring it about. With proper preparation, it can be good indeed. Some old lines illustrate the potential creativity of the senior years:

"King David and King Solomon
Led merry, merry lives
With many, many lady friends
And many, many lives.

But when old age came creeping on
With many, many qualms
King Solomon wrote the Proverbs
And King David wrote the Psalms.

WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

'Smog device' a poor excuse

Dear Mike: Ever since I bought my 1977 Malibu new, the steering wheel vibrates when I'm stopped at a red light. This is very annoying. The steering wheel doesn't vibrate when the car is in motion. The dealer claims that the vibration is caused by the smog device. He says he cannot alter it in any way. Do you have a suggestion? — RATTLED

Dear Rattled: Rough engine idle can be caused by any of three basic engine systems: carburetion, ignition and emissions. The problems can also be due to maladjustments in two or all three of these systems. Mechanics like to blame subtle or hard-to-diagnose ills on the emissions system. And it's surely true that smog equipment doesn't help an engine run smoothly under even the best circumstances. But if your emission-control system is clean and working properly, and if your carburetion and ignition are tuned, you shouldn't feel bad vibes through your steering wheel. So take your car back and explain to the mechanic that you won't accept "smog junk" as an excuse.

Dear Mike: My 1971 Olds Delta 88 was stored for six years and now has only 10,000 miles on the odometer. The automatic transmission emits a whining noise. The colder the day, the louder the noise. As the car warms up, the whine goes away. There's also a clicking sound from the transmission at idle in all ranges but neutral. Any ideas? —WHINO

Dear Whino: Despite the low mileage, I suspect a buildup of varnish inside the trans. The clicking noises could be caused by loose converter-to-flywheel bolts or possibly a cracked flywheel. With automatic transmission noises, it's best to remove and inspect the pan. An experienced mechanic can "read" the metal filings in the pan and can often catch future problems before they happen.

Dear Mike: I own a 1974 Dodge 4wd Ramcharger with a 360-cid V-8 and automatic. My son says that installing headers and dual exhausts will increase gas mileage by 2-3 mpg. Is this correct? Thank you. — RAMCHARGED

Dear Ram: I'm afraid not. In my opinion, aftermarket exhausts systems have been grossly overrated in the past. Header and muffler manufacturers have advertised benefits that simply don't pan out in practice. Your Ramchargers, which has a fairly free-flowing set of exhaust manifolds and no catalytic converter, might average 0.1 to 0.3 miles per gallon higher in gas mileage with headers and duals, but surely not 2-3 mpg.

By PAULINE GRAVES

Those people lucky enough to have an extra bedroom can have the pleasure, luxury actually, of turning it into a room of pure decoration or of making it almost totally utilitarian, such as a home office or a sewing room. If possible though, a room that can be used in more than one way earns its keep. And the second function frequently is that of providing extra bed space for overnight guests.

Such a room, by interior designer Carole Eichen, is seen here. Decorating the room is pure fun, built around a South Seas motif. However, the couch, a twin mattress, does offer sleeping space when such is needed. Most of the time the room is for rest and relaxation and has a totally different environment from the rest of the house, which in itself is a form of relaxation.

The wall paper, white lines on blue background, is a stylized and simplified interpretation of yacht building blueprints, and it sets the South Seas theme. Yachts and the South Seas are almost synonymous. Instead of a conventional bed or sofa, a platform 11½-feet long, 3½-feet wide and 14-inches high, stretches the length of the wall. Although sturdily made of plywood on a 2"x4" frame, the platform is covered with split reeds. These are found as fence material or in roll-up window blinds. The platform extends beyond the length of the mattress, and these end sections function conveniently as tables, handy for lamps, flowers and books.

MDs not ready for old-age boom?

HALIFAX (CP) — What once was a baby boom is developing into an old-age boom and doctors should be preparing for it, says the dean of medicine at Dalhousie University's medical school.

Dr. J. Donald Thatcher says the need for a changed emphasis in medical care will begin to emerge gradually as senior citizens place increasing pressure on the total health care delivery system, a trend that already has begun to develop.

However, while demographic studies show that the number of senior citizens is rising toward a peak in the 1990s, they also predict a decrease in Canada's overall population in the 1980s to 1971's level.

The increased demand for doctors treating the elderly should be balanced by a declining demand for general practitioners, Thatcher says.

In Canada last year there was a net loss of doctors because of the large medical emigration to the United States since the end of the Vietnam war, he says.

Jack Hare, executive-director of the Health Services and Insurance Commission, says Nova Scotia now is subsidizing doctors in an attempt to get them into rural areas which could not, without that subsidy, afford to have a full-time resident doctor.

Set the volume control early

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY — The house is finally quiet. My husband and two teen-agers are in bed, but I am so upset I can't sleep.

Our marriage has been so wonderful, plus we are blessed with two healthy children who have always been well-behaved.

We were an exceptionally happy family until about a year ago. So what's the problem? Loud Music!

Abby, why must music be played so loud today? The only answer we get from our children is, "Because."

The words exchanged between my husband and son tonight were terrible. My husband asked our son politely to please turn down the stereo. Our son ignored him, so his father turned the stereo off and announced that neither of the children would be allowed to play music again until they agreed to keep the volume at a level that was comfortable for us.

I've never seen my husband so angry. The kids are mad and I'm upset.

Do other parents have this problem? And how do they handle it?

AM-FM

DEAR AM — Yes, many parents have that problem. And they handle it the same way your husband handled it — by exploding and finally laying down the law.

The upsetting scene could have been avoided had you laid down the law as soon as the kids started playing music at a volume that was disturbing to you.

Loud music is "in," but the price one pays for constantly assaulting his eardrums with loud sounds is impaired hearing.

* * *

DEAR ABBY — My son has a lot of friends, and lately they have been getting married one after the other. Here is my gripe. He has to lay out $48 every time he rents one of those fancy tuxedos the bridegroom has picked out for him to wear to the wedding.

I think if the bridegroom wants his attendants to wear tuxes, he should pick up the tab for the rental. What is your opinion?

MOM

DEAR MOM — It would be nice if the bridegroom could afford it, but most cannot, so it's customary for each attendant to pay for the rental of his own tuxedo.

* * *

DEAR ABBY — I'm expecting my firt child in four months. All the beauty of pregnancy and motherhood are slowly being destroyed by the horror stories of other women.

Ladies I hardly know have told me how the doctor had to break the baby's arm for delivery, cords choking babies during delivery, etc. And as though that weren't enough, I've been hearing how "dangerous" hospitals are. (Unclean, mistakes made in the lab and pharmacy.) It's all so frightening.

These stories are entirely unsolicited and very unnerving.

FIRST TIMER

DEAR FIRST — You can't stop them from being started, but you can stop them from being finished by saying "Thanks, but I'd rather not hear it."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A divorced woman signed NAMELESS asked if she should let her boyfriend sleep with her while her 15-year-old son was home. I'm glad you said no.

When I was 15 I caught my mother in bed with her boyfriend. I hated it. It hurt me to the core. My respect for my mother dropped so far it wouldn't even register on a scale.

It hurt me to see someone I loved being "used" by a man who couldn't control his urges until after marriage.

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Why did you assume your mother was "used" by a man who couldn't control his urges? Maybe she used him because she couldn't control her urges.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago our small gift shop was robbed.

A few days ago a young man came into the shop, introduced himself and asked to meet the owners. We identified ourselves as the owners, then he told us that he and two other boys had commited the robbery. He apologized and made full restitution for the merchandise stolen, plus 8 per cent interest for the 10 years!

The money will be used for a good cause.

OVERWHELMED

DEAR OVERWHELMED: Thanks for a real day-brightener.

More blessed to receive than give?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Taking has apparently replaced giving at the Bethany Pentacostal Tabernacle which has lost at least $900 in the past three weeks.

Police are investigating the disppearance of cash and cheques from a collection plate in the pastor's office during three Sunday services.

Pastor Bob Seymour said he became suspicious when the collection, which usually totalled about $1,400, amounted to only $858 on June 17, $417 on June 24 and $700 at the July 1 service.

He said he confirmed with long-time church members that envelopes containing cash and cheques they had placed on the collection plate during services had not showed up during the evening money count.

Seymour said that after four ushers passed the collection plate through the congregation each Sunday, two of them took the money upstairs to his office and locked the door when they left.

The first chutist dies at 86

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Funeral service was held Saturday for a pioneer aviator who died the day before the 60th anniversary of his historic first parachute jump in Canada.

Frank Ellis, who received the Order of Canada for his early work in aviation, died Wednesday in hospital. He was 86.

In 1919, Ellis became the first Canadian to make a parachute jump when he leaped out of a plane at Crystal Lake, Ont.

On Thursday, Ontario parachutist Bill Cole re-enacted the first jump at Crystal Beach, wearing an outfit similiar to that used by Ellis in the first jump.

Born in Nottingham, England, Ellis moved to Vancouver in 1914. That year, he became the first Canadian pilot to build his own aircraft.

Ellis worked for West Vancouver Blue Buses for 29 years. He retired in 1962.

Publisher cites story threats

LANGLEY (CP) — Newspaper publisher Peter Lasch says he was adbucted Thursday by armed men, warned not to publish a story in his paper then dumped in a ditch.

Lasch said he was on his way home from his office when an unmarked car containing two men drove up beside him; one of the men yelled "police" and motioned him to pull over.

He said he pulled over and got out of the car, then was forced into the other vehicle at gunpoint. Lasch said that after more than an hour of driving, he was taken into a house where a third man told him he "couldn't do certain things because it wouldn't be nice."

Lasch said the "certain things" involve a story he intends to publish next week but he declined to elaborate.

A spokesman said Lasch, who started the Daily News in Vancouver June 20, was located near Mission in the Fraser Valley early Thursday morning but would not then release further details. Police investigation was continuing.

Abbotsford RCMP, meanwhile, "have taken certain precautions on behalf of several Abbotsford residents in connection with the Lasch incident," said Corporal Bernard Gilding.

One resident under police protection is Robert San Cartier, a Canadian oil specialist who made international headlines last year after his release from a Saudi Arabia jail.

Cartier said Friday that following his arrest in Saudi Arabia for possession of alcohol and torture he eventually escaped from jail with the aid of Lasch, who at that time owned a construction company in Saudi Arabia.

He said he was dropped off at the side of a road near Mission, then walked to a phone booth and called home.

Boom in Indian arts wins subsidy raise

VANCOUVER (CP) — A boom in British Columbia's $3.5 million Indian arts industry has prompted a $300,000 increase in federal subsidies.

Fred Walchli, director of Indian affairs for B.C., says the subsidies will rise to $700,000 from $400,000 to pay for teaching craft techniques and materials.

Walchi, in Vancouver to open the annual Indian Arts and Crafts Society Trade Show, said a market study conducted last year showed that artists would not be able to meet increased demands for northwest coast art.

Average income for the 1,000 native artists has increased to $10,000 from $5,000 annually over the last five years, but "it's a tough way to make a living," said artist Victor Newman.

"You have to get known," Newman said after winning second prize at the show for his prints and carvings. At $15 and $30 apiece, his prints were among the cheapest there.

Gordon Fisk, who conducted the market study for the artists, said he found buyers were looking for "something unique in the whole world" such as northwest coast art.

Fisk said that native artists may be able to meet the heavy demand for their work in five years. However, certain crafts such as Salish weaving are time-consuming processes involving natural techniques which technological advances would only cheapen.

Victoria pipers on top

NANAIMO (CP) — The Victoria pipe band won the major pipe band championship at the annual Upper Island Highland Games during the weekend, edging Triumph Street pipe band, also of Victoria.

Vancouver Ladies pipe band won the Grade 2 title and the award for best bass and tenor combination. Powell River pipe band won the Grade 3 title, while Campbell River won the juvenile trophy.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Bill Wilson has been re-elected as president of the United Native Nations at the annual meeting of the group.

The president campaigned on a program of cautious, long-term planning at the local level of all native Indian areas of British Columbia.

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #116. Many thanks to Malcolm Ashford, Provincial Development Coordinator Lacrosse for his very informative letter regarding selling of the Gold Medal coupon books to raise funds for the British Columbia Lacrosse Association and the Canadian Association for Health, Physical, Education and Recreation. Your City's Watchdog agrees with his statement "I am sure you can appreciate that if we asked the citizens to merely donate $13.50 to our cause, the response would be minimal. However, by selling them a gold medal coupon book, out of which we receive $13.50, and the consumer in return gets legitimate value from the coupons, we both benefit. As you can see, $13.50 or 46% of the retail price of the book is returned to Amateur Sport and Recreation nationally and provincially. When you compare this with the return to amateur sport of both the Western Express and Loto Canada, 6.5% and 3.9% respectively, the Gold Medal Campaign speaks for itself. Your City Watchdog after receiving numerous phone calls still wishes to state that it appears any person on low income cannot afford to purchase the Gold Medal coupons. Many thanks to a member of the Victoria Police Athletics Association for the phone call explaining that they are not connected with this project in anyway. If you wish further information regarding City matters please phone 383-6259 Your City Watchdog C. Joe Richards or write PO Box 154, Victoria. Postscript: Mark another traffic victim to Esquimalt Road's Death Alley and many thanks to those people who wrote letters and phoned Your City's Watchdog regarding this dangerous traffic area.

A GREAT TEAM!
BRITISH SEAGULL
Gibson Powercraft

Gibson Powercraft was recently appointed Victoria's dealer for Seagull. We have all models in stock and a comprehensive inventory of parts. We will offer the same great service for Seagull outboards as we have always offered for Johnson and Evinrude. Very heavy thrust at low R.P.M. makes these engines great for auxilaries or for pushing heavy work boats at displacement hull speed. If you're looking for a kicker, come in and see us about a Seagull!

Science souring public?

TORONTO (CP) — Recent failings of technology, such as the accident at the Three Mile Island power plant in Pennsylvania and structural flaws in DC-10 aircraft, have lowered scientists' credibility, a U.S. scientist says.

Philip Handler, president of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences, said Sunday that the U.S. Skylab, expected to drop from orbit Wednesday, could be the last straw in the public's growing disaffection with science.

Handler said that if the disintegrating space station destroys lives and property, the repercussions for the support of science could be an even greater disaster.

Although biochemistry can be credited with the development of penicillin and other drugs, government funding of research has dwindled, he said at the opening of the International Congress of Biochemistry.

Gordin Kaplan, president of the Canadian Biochemistry Society and chairman of this week's congress, said public funding of biochemistry in Canada has been poor. The Canadian government's support of biochemical research is equal to that of Italy, he said.

Handler told the convention he was skeptical of claims that man-made environmental chemicals are causing increased cancer.

He said there is no epidemic of cancer, adding that the incidence of the disease has remained unchanged in the U.S. for half a century — except for lung cancer, which is up significantly among cigarette smokers.

"For most environmental pollutants that have recently been called to attention, we are concerned with potential but as yet undemonstrated hazard," he said.

More than 6,000 biochemists from more than 60 countries are in Toronto for the congress, being held for the first time in Canada. It continues until Friday.

Handler and Nobel prize winner Arthur Kornberg, professor of biochemistry at Stanford University, were the two key speakers at the opening session. They urged scientists to be more aggressive in promoting the importance of scientific research.

They said they disagree with the U.S. government's restrictions on research into DNA — deoxyribonucleic acid — the carrier of genetic information for all organisms.

Handler said restrictions make it almost impossible to do the research and make it more expensive.

Most countries, including Canada, impose some conditions on research into DNA.

Camosun College students Dave Keevil and Rod Crowe have received the award of merit for a videotape program instructing how to process black and white film.

The tape was submitted to the Media Festival in Ottawa. The festival is run by the Association for Media and Technology in Education in Canada, a national organization.

Centre leader resigns

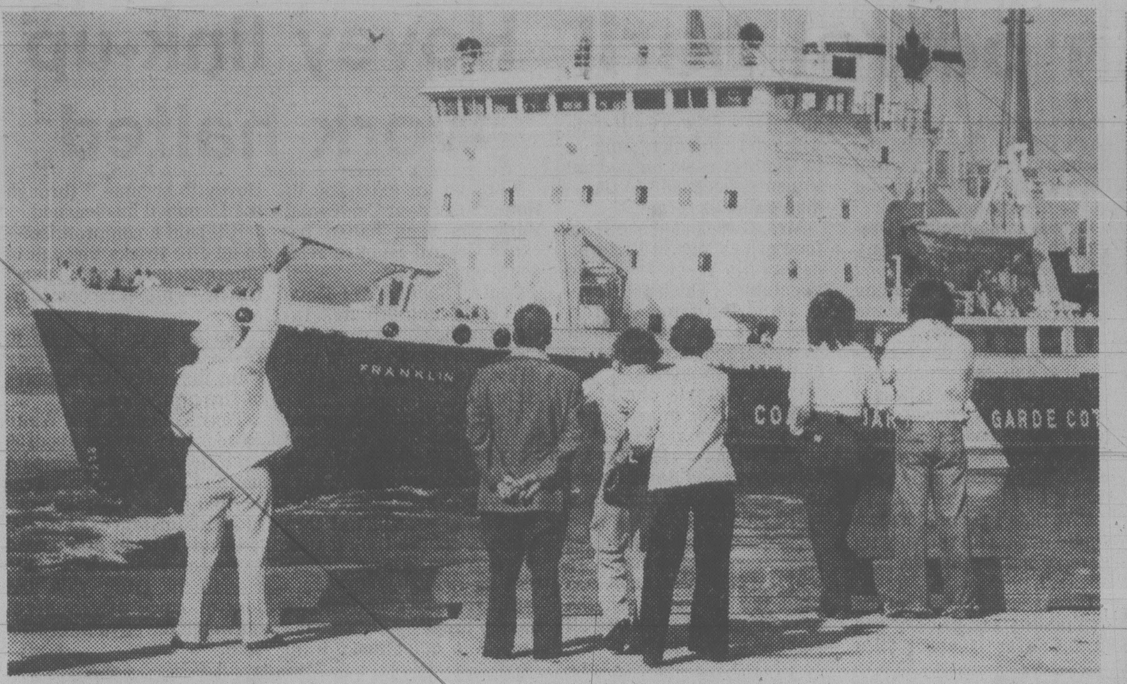
DUNCAN — Douglas Denton-Howes has resigned as the administrator of Lake Cowichan and District Activity Centre because of massive cuts in spending.

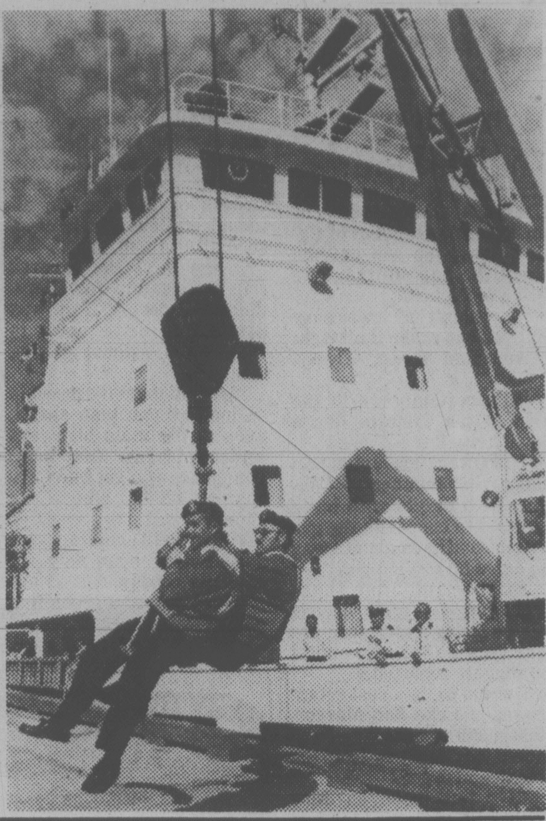
His resignation takes effect July 30, a month after emergency funds ran out.

He is expected to return to teaching at Lake Cowichan senior high school next term.

He said he could see no funds being made available for the usual September start-up.

Appeals for money were turned down by the provincial government, he said





ARCTIC-BOUND Canadian Coast Guard icebeaker Franklin had a small gallery of wellwishers as she sailed Sunday. Last men aboard were unidentified pair at right who boarded via a crane and a sling after casting off lines. The $50 million vessel, built at Burrard's shipyard in Vancouver, will replace the Camsell on the western Arctic run before heading to the eas coast and her home base in St. John's, Nfld. She is expected to be at Point Barrow, Alaska, July 17. (Photos byJohn McKay)

DUNCAN — Farm land owners will get a break on school taxes next year, provided their land meets standard of productivity set down by the B.C. Assessment Authority.

Assessment authority chairman Don Morton told members of the Cowichan Valley Regional District board that farm land owners will be able to save half of their school taxes in 1980 under Bill 13, the Public Schools Assessment Act.

The 50 per cent saving will apply to agricultural reserve lands as well as active farms.

Where only a portion of land is actively farmed, however, only that section will qualify.

Morton said that when the bill comes into effect the end of this year, many areas now designated as farm land will lose their classification because they have not been used for farming purposes.

There are 55,000 properties classified as farms in B.C. and Morton estimated as many as 10 per cent could loses their status.

He said that 6.2 per cent of the 54,300 acres in the Cowichan Valley are in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

GARDENING

Hilda Beastall

Trimming of hedge plants is a bit different to pruning flowering shrubs, and to some gardeners the job is more fun. The reason is that hedge trimming is done traditionally with hedge shears, needing only strong arms and a straight eye.

Wait a moment though before setting to work. Let us talk about the kinds of hedge plants that are in gardens of Victoria and nearby.

First we note that hedges as solid screens to a garden are happily not much in use locally, but screens against noise of traffic, wind and frost drainage are seen, often within garden boundaries where they appear as low dividers.

These mini-hedges also form useful backdrops for certain ornamental plants needing a special micro-climate created for their wellbeing.

Privet is fairly popular for this purpose and if not overplanted need not deplete the surrounding soil if plentiful humus is added on a regular basis.

To keep privet within desired bounds use the hedge shears in June, July and August. Trim not only the tops but the sides to keep green shoots coming. Privet should not be encouaged to flower in small gardens and trimming in summer months removes the flowering tips before they have chance to come into bud.

Golden-leaved privet is attractive more as a specimen plant than as a hedge since it is not reliably winter hardy here. It does make a lovely golden accent plant in a sunny sheltered spot.

The shiny little leaves come closely together on the stems so that the effect is naturally tight and compact. This desirable habit is further encouraged by using the hedge shears in the summer months to trim the top and sides as with privet.

An important detail when working with hedges which are to be viewed at close range in a garden is to encourage green growth right to soil level. This is done by maintaining a slight outward slope from top to bottom. In other words have the bottom of the hedge slightly wider than at the top.

This method of shearing hedges allows sun and rain to reach all twigs on the sides, stimulating growth and keeping it green to the base.

An additional bonus is that a tight hedge at soil level prevents many wandering seeds from landing in inaccessible spots to germinate and become a problem before being noticed.

The purple-leaved berberis has been replaced by evergreen species, more ornament in flower and fruit as well as their foliage in winter. These spiny hedges offer difficulties in trimming, but the job should not be neglected if they are in positions where control is essential, as beside paths or near other plants needing freedom from spiny smothering.

Use leather gloves as protection against spines when working with berberis. Gather all pieces for safety so that later work in weeding is not hindered by unexpected thorns in the hands.

Laurel needs a bit different handling. The large leathery leaves tend to become browned when cut with shears. For a relatively short hedge use hand secateurs to cut all pieces that grow outwards beyond the desired width, removing complete twigs. A very tall hedge may have the top sheared since the browned leaves will not be visible unless from upper windows of the home.

If the hedge has been tended regularly since first planted, the top growths can be cut out in the same way as the sides. This will maintain the present height or the height can be gradually increased each year until the needed height is reached.

All these hedge plants, except the laurel, may have one more light trimming in early August if this seems desirable. After that time the new growth made during late summer must be allowed to ripen in the sun and mature in the cooler days of fall to go safely through the winter without being nipped by frost and cold winds.

TORONTO (CP) — About three years from now, Eric Grove and the Canadian Warplane Heritage have a $140,000 date with a lady they love — a Lancaster.

That's what it will cost and how long it will take to put the vintage Second World War bomber into flying shape.

"We haven't a doubt in the world that she'll fly again," says Grove, 60, a member of Canadian Warplane Heritage and a community planner with the Ontario government.

New wiring, hydraulics, guns, engines, gun turrets and all the cosmetic touches needed to restore her will cost at least $140,000 and the association is looking for individual and corporate benefactors.

The organization was formed in 1973 to collect and restore Second World War and other old aircraft. Much of the work is done voluntarily by the group's 250 members who pay $100 a year for membership.

When she flies again, she will be one of only three airborne around the world. The other two are in Britain.

She'll be wearing the markings of Flying Officer Andrew Mynarski's 419 RCAF (Moose) Squadron. The Winnipeg native was mid-upper gunner on June 12, 1944, in a raid on the railway marshalling yards at German-occupied Cambrai, France.

A fighter set fire to the Lancaster and the crew was ordered to bail out. When Mynarski saw the rear gunner trapped in his turret, he braved the flames to try to help him, but his parachute and clothing caught fire.

As the rear gunner gestured to Mynarski to save himself, Mynarski stood to attention with the flames licking around him, saluted his friend and jumped to his death.

Bikers' no-show

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An anticipated influx of motorcycle gang members did not materialize this weekend, despite burial of two of the five victims of last week's mass murder at an Outlaws' gang clubhouse, police said Sunday.

"To the best of our knowledge, they are not here," said Police Capt. G. L. Painter. "If they are here, they are keeping quiet and out of sight."

Four men and a woman were shot to death in the Outlaws' clubhouse Wednesday in what was dubbed the Fourth of July massacre.

Gas shortage didn't stop the Owens

Victoria worth petrol peril

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

"We just decided to take a chance," say Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Owens, typical of an increasing number of Californians who are defying the U.S. gas shortage to drive to Victoria.

"I wouldn't say it was easy but you can make it all right if you plan ahead," Owens said.

The Owens are among an increasing number of California tourists who have learned to cope with the gas crunch and have found a way to drive up to Victoria.

In May and June there were few California licence plates in town but more are arriving daily, local hotel managers reported.

"We left home on June 29th. I filled up the tank just before I left because we have an odd number licence plate and we can only buy gas every other day. We avoided downtown Los Angeles completely because that's where the long line-ups are. We kept going and drove up to Bakerfield on the first day.

"We filled the tank again that evening and after that the rest was fairly easy."

There is no gas shortage in Oregon or Washington, although stations tend to close soon after 4 p.m.

Owens says the reverse trip is possible for Canadians wondering if it was possible to drive down to Disneyland without getting stranded.

"We told them it's possible as long as you plan ahead, keep to the main highways and avoid LA. Just keep going once you get into California. That's where the shortage is."

"They put up a green flag when they're open and a red one when they're closed. That works well except you can't see the flags from the highway and you don't find out the bad news until you get to the station."

Owens said once into Oregon there was never any problem getting gas as long as they remembered to buy it by 4 p.m. After that some of the stations close.

"Many people don't realize that the gas situation is not as bad now as it was a few weeks ago. There seems to be more gas every day. There's still a problem but we're learning to cope with it."

Owens was pleased by the availability and price of gas in B.C. Gas is about $1 a gallon in southern California while the equivalent amount in Victoria costs only about 80 cents, because the Canadian gallon is larger.

Mrs. Owens said she finds food prices high in Victoria, especially fresh fruit and vegetables (which are largely imported from California). She also found meat and seafood expensive by California standards.

"We are allowing plenty of time. If we run low on gas we will just stay over someplace until the stations open the next day. We'll get home all right — hopefully."

Work on an extension of Hovey Road near Centennial Park has been halted because Central Saanich residents oppose it.

Central Saanich Ald. Dave Hill said council has instructed the public works department to stop filling in a gully until it hears from the residents.

Council thought the road extension would cut two minutes off the time it took the fire department to service the area.

But residents who bought nearby property because the area was quiet don't want Hovey to become a through road, council has learned.

Hill said a compromise — to let fire trucks through in emergencies but not general traffic — might be considered.

But he said it was up to residents to decide if they want the extra two minutes of fire protection.

Tony Yonge, of 1600 White Road, said Saturday about 32 area residents who signed a petition against the road extension don't want it under any circumstances.

Disadvantages of the road extension, such as a possible rise in the crime rate and loss of rural atmosphere, outweigh the advantages, he said.

Victoria's tourist industry and retail trade are soaring to unprecedented peaks while the construction industry has slipped to a new low, according to an economic survey by the Canada Employment Centre.

Hotel and motel owners in the downtown core and along the Gorge were surprised to be able to put up the "sold out" sign frequently during June and the occupancy rate ranged between 95 and 98 per cent.

There were a few U.S. no-shows but the rooms were quickly filled by a record number of Canadian visitors.

Restaurants and stores report sales up eight per cent from the previous June.

Local CEC manager Wally Pickering said the early signs indicate the tourist flow will continue to increase over the summer months and retail sales should be strong.

Store managers report that consumer confidence is at a five-year high, he said.

Employment is stable in both the shipyard and local sawmills and the real estate market continues becomes stronger month by month.

Unemployment among building trades has hit the range of 30 to 40 per cent.

"Only very small crews are currently working and peak employment will not be reached for at least two or three months," Pickering said.

Some recent contract awards include an addition to the Keating office of B.C. Tel, a Victoria Arthritis Treatment Centre, electrical work at Esquimalt Graving Dock, a $5.6 million University of Victoria Law Building, and a community centre at Springridge.

Employment at the Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard stood at 715 at the end of June, compared with 750 in May. Employment will increase by August when work begins on a large ferry.

Oakland Fisheries expects to employ 200 people this month for salmon canning but the hiring will mainly be done from a long list of previous employees.

The CEC farm labor office reported that a few jobs are available on berry, vegetable and potato farms as well as for haying.

But many farmers are using a you-pick system and they report they are satisfied with net cash return.

Pickering said the flow of outside workers continues to be high. Of the 1,800 people who registered for work at the main CEC office at 810 Fort, about 560 were from outside the Victoria area. Many were from outside the province.

Pickering said there seems to be a large number of semi-tourists who come to Victoria for the summer in hopes of landing permanent work so they can stay.

The provincial government reports as many as 5,000 outsiders come to the Vancouver and Victoria areas in summer months in hopes of landing a job. The provincial government hires only about 320 per month.

'Journey of a lifetime'

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — An international group of tourists, promised an "unforgettable journey of a lifetime," is stranded in a remote corner of Botswana as the result of the vagaries of the Rhodesia war, the group's spokesman said today.

The 20-member group of Canadians, Australians, Americans, Belgians, Dutch and British left here five weeks ago at the start of a planned 17-week overland trip by truck through Africa and on to London.

They had paid about $1,650 each, plus $235 for the "food kitty," to the tour companies, Tracks Trans-African Expedition of London and Treasure Tours of Australia.

Macrostie and New Zealand-born Dale Baston, a Vancouver electrician, made their way here after hitching rides and catching trains from Kasane, in the northeast corner of Botswana.

"We left the rest of the group there at Kasane and unless others have decided to hitch, that's where they're stuck now without transport," Macrostie said.

Two sisters stabbed to death

Cow devours $9,000 snack

SOLDO, Italy (Reuter) — A cow in this Italian alpine village swallowed a jacket with $9,000 in its pockets, police said Sunday.

The jacket and money belonged to local hotel owner Paul Hanny who was on the way to the bank in nearby Bolzano.

He dropped in at a friend's farm where he left his jacket in the barn. Hanny tried to pull his jacket out of the cow's throat but only retrieved its sleeves.

DC-10s flying soon?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After more than a month on the ground, a U.S. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman says the beleagured U.S. DC-10 fleet could be back in the air this week.

The 138 planes used by eight U.S. airlines had carried about 60,000 to 70,000 passengers daily — about nine per cent of commercial U.S. air traffic — before they were grounded for investigation of possible defects following the worst air tragedy in U.S. history.

With the planes parked, busy summer air traffic — made busier by the gasoline shortage — has been snarled while some airlines have been forced to lay off employees.

A decision to lift the agency's order grounding the wide-body jets was expected as early as today, or possibly Tuesday, FAA spokesman Jerry Doolittle said Sunday in Washington.

But even if the order is lifted, the fate of the 138 U.S. jumbo jets rests in the hands of a federal judge.

FAA chief Langhorne Bond put together his recommendations for the grounded jetliners over the weekend in Los Angeles and was to announce his decision in Washington, Doolittle said.

The chances "would be fairly good" that the DC-10s would be back in the air this week, Doolittle said.

Carter swings to economy in marathon reassessment

By FRED BARNES
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — U.S. President Jimmy Carter, seeking a new direction for the politics and policies of his beleaguered administration, is polishing off his high-level discussions today about the nation's energy shortage and turning to talks about the troubled economy.

While energy and economics were the main topics, a reshuffling of officials in the White House and Cabinet has also been touched on. But press secretary Jody Powell insisted reports of major shifts "reflect sheer speculation."

After four days of high-level talks, it appears that a variety of key issues remained to be resolved.

For instance, the president and his lieutenants are still struggling to decide on a program for developing synthetic fuels. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus were slated to testify on the subject before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee today, but were forced to beg off.

Moreover, Powell told reporters that the president was reviewing the nation's oil allocation system, which is generally viewed as ineffective. Schlesinger is known to favor scrapping it, while some White House aides prefer to retain the system as the lesser of evils.

The press secretary asserted that two crucial decisions made earlier by Carter were not being reassessed — the gradual decontrol of oil prices and the proposed tax on windfall profits of oil companies.

However, it is understood that there is a debate among Carter's advisers on whether to speed up the decontrol process, with Schlesinger favoring swifter decontrol.

For his morning session today, the president had called about 20 members of Congress to Camp David to discuss energy, including Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Sens. Henry Jackson, Mark Hatfield, Pete Domenici, and Bennett Johnston.

For the afternoon, Carter brought about 15 congressional leaders to his sequestered summit to discuss the economy with Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal and other administration economic advisers.

The shift to substantive talks on policy matters began Sunday as Schlesinger, a congresswoman, three governors and a group of energy experts conferred to hours with Carter.

Sooke pair found near Gold River

An RCMP murder team is in the Gold River area in the hunt for a killer who stabbed two Sooke sisters to death.

The bodies of the women, apparently slain as they hitch-hiked to Gold River, were found Saturday morning.

Police said they were lying on a quiet logging road a few miles short of their destination.

The women were identified as Christine Beatrice Thomas (nee Howard), 26, and Helena Rose Howard, 16, both of 1939 Powluik Crescent, in Sooke.

They were found slumped together on Elk River Timber's Ucona Road.

There was no immediate indication of a motive.

RCMP did not say whether a robbery had occurred or whether there was any indication of a sexual assault.

An RCMP spokesman said the discovery was made by a pair of fishermen about 5:30 a.m., some 7 kilometres southwest of the logging town of Gold River.

Campbell River RCMP, who are coordinating the investigation, today issued a plea for public assistance in trying to trace the movements of the two women who were believed hitch-hiking to Gold River from their home in Sooke.

Police said the dead women have relatives in the Gold River area and they believe tghe two women frequently hitch-hiked back and forth between Sooke and the up-Island community.

Police say that Christine Thomas, who was 5 ft. one and weighed 126 lbs., was believed to be wearing a pink blouse and blue skirt with purple and white flowers when she left her home in Sooke.

Police urge anyone who saw the pair Friday or Saturday or knows anything of their movements, to contact either the Gold River RCMP detachment (at 283-2221) or Campbell River investigating officer, Sgt. Ellis Peleskey (at 286-6221).

French save 837 refugees

Times News Services

A French hospital ship arrived in Singapore today with 837 Vietnamese refugees, including three pregnant women, rescued from boats in the South China Sea, a French Embassy spokeswoman said.

The ship, the Ille de Lumiere, was sent by French voluntary organizations to provide medical aid to Vietnamese refugees on the refugee island of Pulau Bidong off Malaysia's east coast.

It has been cruising off Bidong Island giving medical aid to refugees on the island during the last three months. The island holds about 54,000 refugees.

The ship left Bidong waters Thursday and rescued the refugees from their boats adrift in the South China Sea as it sailed down Malaysia's east coast towards Singapore.

A French Embassy spokeswoman said Paris has guaranteed their resettlement in France.

The ship is manned by four doctors and a 15-man crew, all of them voluntary workers.

In Ottawa Sunday, Vietnam's ambassador to Canada claimed that most of Southeast Asia's tragic "boat people" are ethnic Chinese and their exodus from Vietnam has been engineered by the Chinese government.

Tranh Tuan Anh said on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's Sunday Morning program that China was deliberately stirring up the "wha" people, — ethnic Chinese living in Vietnam — to disrupt the war-ravaged land.

"Since 1975, the Chinese leaders have been trying to bring about more and more difficulties for Vietnam," he said. "They themselves have created the massive exodus of 'wha' people from Vietnam, with a view to causing economic, social and political turmoil in the country."

There is no "undertaking yet" to send Canadian Armed Forces aircraft to pick up stranded refugees from Malaysia and Hong Kong camps, say external affairs and defence department officials.

The external affairs official also said there is no decision yet to increase the refugee quota, which officially remains at 8,000.

Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, today urged the two million members of his union umbrella group to pull together and show compassion for the Vietnamese boat people.

Times News Services

Skylab is getting closer, and NASA trackers now think it will enter Earth's atmosphere in a 30-hour period centred on 9:10 a.m. Victoria-time Wednesday.

It dipped to within 119.2 miles of Earth Sunday.

(Does insurance cover Skylab hitting a house in Victoria? See page 19.)

As Skylab fever continued to mount, Indian President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy said in New Delhi that the space station is a demon from which only God could save the people.

"The people today are left to their fate and only God has the power to save them . . .

Meanwhile, in neighboring Sri Lanka, some villagers have offered human skulls and chickens as sacrifices and are purchasing "Skylab oil" to prevent chunks of the falling space station from harming them.

A fist fight broke out at one point between two men because one called the other "skylab".

Execution ground

MANAGUA (AP) — Nine bullet-riddled bodies were found at a Nicaraguan government execution ground Sunday, indicating growing national guard frustration with the Sandinista guerrillas who have taken control of 24 of Nicaragua's cities and bogged down President Anastasio Somoza's drive to win back one of them.

Reporters found the bodies of the young men, most of them blindfolded with their hands tied, on the shores of Lake Managua. The nine appeared to have been dead only a few hours.

National strike hits CP freight

Canadian Press

Freight handlers for Canadian Pacific Express walked off the job today across the country after a breakdown in negotiations between the company and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Collin Gribbons, the union's director of information, said that all of the about 2,700 workers from the 60 terminals were on strike. Negotiations broke down Sunday.

Union members propose a new two-year contract that would give them an hourly increase of 66 cents in the first year and 58 cents in the second.

The workers, who pick up and deliver rail, truck and air freight for Canadian Pacific, have been in a legal strike position for more than a week. Their last contract expired Dec. 31.

No end to Jubilee 'horror stories'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The phone rings and it is another Jubilee nurse calling the Times.

"You wouldn't believe how bad the conditions have become," she said. "I'm sorry I can't publicize my name because I think they would fire me. I just want to tell you a young woman was admitted last night and they couldn't find a ward for her. She died this morning. She spent the last night of her life out in the hall."

The phone rings again. Another nurse.

"I had to work two straight shifts because they wouldn't hire an additional nurse. I worked 15 hours. No coffee break. I didn't even have time to stop of supper."

Another call: "They keep postponing operations because of a lack of beds. Some operations are postponed again and again."

And another: "I'm doing the job of two nurses this week and I don't like to complain. But I can hardly bear it when I realize I'm not giving my patients all the attention they need. When I get home from work now I just sit down and cry."

These are a few of more than 14 calls received since the Times reported that morale has fallen to a low ebb at the Jubilee as a result of staff cutbacks.

Another call: "We moved Mrs. ----- again today. We had to move her because of lack of staff where she was. That's the third time we've moved her in three days. That patient is so sick she should not be moved!"

And another: "My daughter is a nurse and she can't give her name and she never used to complain but it's getting too much for her."

Another: "I have a sore back from lifting patients but I'm still working. I have to."

All of the comments have the same theme. The hospital does not have enough money to hire the staff it needs and, as a result, the standard of medical care is declining.

The allegation by Health Minister Bob McClelland that there is a nursing shortage was refuted by three on-call nurses.

Nurse A: "I offered to work all summer but they (the Jubilee administration) said they didn't have funds to hire me on a full-time basis."

Nurse B: "I'm always available but they only called me for eight days in May and not at all in June."

Nurse C: "I keep asking for more work but they don't call me in."

All of the nurses are frightened about the consequences of making a public statement and are concerned that even phoning a reporter might be a violation of medical ethics. But they are also angry, frustrated and worried about their patients.

Victoria Medical Association president Dr. Patricia Johnston said there is no doubt Jubilee needs a larger nursing staff.

"The nurses are overworked and their morale is declining. We have been aware of this for some time. Doctors share their concerns. But neither the doctors nor the nurses feel they can do anything about the situation."

She said only public pressure can get Health Minister McClelland to increase funding to hire additional medical employees.

An example, said said, was the minister's announcement Thursday that he is willing to increase Jubilee open heart operations to nine a week from six if requested to do so by the B.C. Medical Association. The request is expected to be made.

Johnston said the welcome announcement was the result of public pressure following a number of news stories about the long waiting list for open heart surgery.

Whether any further improvements would be forthcoming depends upon public reaction to the Jubilee's needs, she said.

Durrance: His life changed

Weapons in hand, these hunters hike up a hill . . .

. . . and enjoy a rest and view from the top

He may have been a head hunter

Now he's a man with a mission

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

There was a day when David Durrance hustled to make a buck

He worked as a teacher and built homes as a sideline.

He's now a man with a mission and lives with the mountain people of the northern Philippines — many of whom were headhunters as recently as 1970 — in an effort to raise their living standards.

He's back in Victoria working as a roofer but not for himself. His concern now is to earn money for his overseas neighbors.

Durrance's driving interest in the mountain people began in 1973 when he was on a world tour and staying at a hostel at Sagada in the northern Philippines.

There he met two Anglican sisters who asked him to sponsor a girl called Petra Angpao who wanted to be a nurse.

"She was raised by the Holy Child Orphanage and would have to go on back to the woods if someone couldn't help her," he said.

Durrance agreed to sponsor Petra and later received a letter saying that Petra's old grandparents were dying and wanted to see her sponsor.

He went to Petra's barrio (village) and what he saw changed his life.

The children were dirty and many were suffering from malnutrition, internal parasites, scabies and eye infections.

Families of between eight to 10 slept together on bare wooden floors without bed mats or blankets. There were no tables. The people sat on their haunches to eat.

Durrance's first meal was tadpoles and rice.

He says conditions in the other barrios scattered around Sagada — a town of about 2,000 people — are the same.

With Durrance sponsoring her, Petra has completed two years of university and four years in St. Ann's Hospital's school of nursing at Manila and has now joined Durrance in his campaign to help her people.

For the past 2½ years, Durrance has also sponosored an agricultural student, Danny Gonoyan, who comes from the same barrio as Petra.

But Durrance's involvment has become much deeper.

In January, 1978, he leased a building in Sagada for 100 pesos ($13 to $14) a month which he uses as his headquarters and home.

And when he returns in mid-September he hopes, with Petra's help, to set up a medical clinic.

His first concern was to try to improve the people's diet. He tells how children will spend half a day catching beetles for food. The legs and wings are taken off and the remainder cooked.

"I'm trying to introduce new crops," he says, adding that watermelon seeds were the first things he planted.

Next he brought in 6,000 seedlings ranging from orange and coconut to coffee and calamnsi, a small green lemon-like fruit that is rich in vitamin C.

In July, 1978, he formed the International Association for the Transformation of Man, a Canadian-registered charitable organization which he hopes will produce both funds and help for his adopted people.

In a barrio, if a school exists, it usually goes only to Grade 4 and he knows of one such school which has only three teachers to cope with up to 370 children. It has no equipment, not even a blackboard.

Durrance says for $15 a month, people can sponsor a child so that he or she can leave their barrio and further their education.

He tells of three children he and Danny took on their first bus ride to Sagada. "They wanted us to look at the trees running by," he recalls.

The youngsters wolfed down the first half then dashed outside.

"Just like a dog burying a bone they were looking for somewhere to hide the other half for later," he says.

Durrance said his main goal now is to fund his agency.

"If its name means anything, it is to become more human, more sharing, more compassionate human beings," he says.

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

If the sky falls, we shall catch larks.

Had the French writer Rabelais ever envisaged an 80-ton Skylab tumbling from the heavens, he probably wouldn't have waxed lyrical about falling objects.

The Spaniards took Rabelais' proverb and altered it slightly. "If the sky falls, the pots will be broken."

Theirs was a much more practical approach, but their concern for broken crockery would have proven unwarranted as far as Skylab goes.

According to Victoria insurance agents, any loss caused by a falling Skylab or parts thereof will be covered by any typical home insurance policy, specifically the clause which guards against "any object, which, while falling," strikes the outside of a building, be it house or skyscraper.

That's the word after the Times asked insurance agents today if they had received any calls regarding the possibility of Skylab or a piece of Skylab skewering their homes.

Allan Tolsma, an independent agent, said he hadn't had a single call on the matter.

The latest prediction — and they're changing almost hourly — calls for chunks of the U.S. spacecraft to fall somewhere in Autralia at 9:10 a.m. Wednesday. However, you can go 15 hours either way from that estimate, which means Skylab still could fall pretty much anywhere along its flight path — including Victoria.

Tosma said any damage caused by Skylab would be covered by the standard clause in most policies.

"But if that piece of material were radioactive," he mused, "it probably wouldn't be covered because that would come under another section covering radioactivity and wars and such." But Tolsma couldn't be sure.

Over at Westcoast Savings Insurance, manager Frank Lane agreed that regular policies would cover any Skylab damage and he too felt that radioactive contamination would probably be excluded.

He said his office had received five calls about Skylab, all of them customers merely asking if their homes were insured against falling space vehicles.

Where can radioactive coverage be bought?

"Why don't you check with Jim Eisler over at Coast Claims? He's one of the best adjusters in the business," said Lane.

Eisler suggested the radioactivity problem could probably be covered by an endorsement to an existing policy.

But, he said, "Radioactivity, much like war risks, is generally considered to be a problem of government, not of private insurance companies."

What if someone is killedby a piece of Skylab?

If you're covered by life insurance, Kevin McLaughlin of Canada Life Assurance says most insurance policies would pay off, without any special endorsements.

Edmund "Woody" Woodward, vice-president of Harboard Insurance, said his firm has had instructions from five or six persons to get Lloyd's of London coverage against the possibility of being struck by Skylab.

Search continues for hiker

Donnanm Peppar, 39, of Vancouver, described as an inexperienced hiker, became separated from 11 other persons.

Also taking part in the search are staff members of the Strathcona Provincial Park, the Strathcona Lodge and an an RCMP helicopter.

Peppar's party left Comox Glazier on July 1 and was headed for Flower Ridge in Strathcona Park.

The missing man is warmly-clad but it is not known what provisions he may have with him.

Inquiry ordered in school rift

A special fact-finding commission to investigate a hiring dispute at St. Joseph's Catholic School has been appointed by Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo.

Bishop De Roo said today he appointed the commission because it appears the rift between the school board, teachers and parents is worsening.

"It has become apparent the item cannot be resolved locally without further difficulties and polarization."

In a letter to school board chairman Emily Hudson dated July 6, Bishop De Roo said continued public attention also prompted his move.

Hudson, who last week denied the existence of any serious problems at the school, said today she has no comment on the Bishop's decision.

The commission will interview people it feels can contribute to the solution, the letter said.

It will also receive all written statements and compile a complete dossier.

At the end of the investigation, recommendations will be made to the executive of the Catholic Public Schools of Victoria Diocese (CPSVD).

De Roo is president of the CPSVD.

The commission will be chaired by Rev. W.H. Bulloch, a retired teacher and pastor.

Other members are Louise Griffin of St. Patrick's parish, Oak Bay; Dorothy Comerford of Queen of Peace parish, Esquimalt, and Dr. Jean-Paul Vinay, retired University of Victoria dean and member of St. Jean-Baptiste parish, Victoria.

Dr. Gerald Ricard, administrative assistant to education Minister Pat McGeer, will act as advisor to the commission.

Heaton said he was resigning because the school board refused to renew the contracts of two teachers after assuring him all teachers would be rehired in September.

But he also said the board was interfering in the running of the school and that moral was low and bound to get even lower in September.

Whelda Steeves, president of the parents association, said a power struggle between Heaton and the board was affecting the school. She said parents were shocked at Heaton's resignation and wanted some answers.

Three board members, including former chairman Henny Voorsluys, resigned over the issue.

Heaton asked Bishop De Roo to investigate the power structure of the parish-elected boards. He said one board for the entire district would be much more objective than a series of small, locally elected boards.

Bishop De Roo said last week he would rather wait and see if the board could resolve its differences before stepping in.

He said that Catholic school boards were suffering "growing pains" under the new Independent Schools Act, which imposes a degree of uniformity never before experienced.

Under the act, independent schools are entitled to a maximum of approximately $450 per student annually if they conform to standards imposed by the education ministry.

At last, the missing masks come home

MIDWAY THROUGH LAST Friday afternoon, history repeated itself for the Cape Mudge band of the Kwakiutl Nation. We watched a boat edge in toward the village beach. Its after-section was crammed with visiting Indian dignitaries dressed in their finest ceremonial bib and tucker. They danced. From a vantage-point on the foreshore, while drums throbbed behind him, James Sewid welcomed the guests to a feast-day.

We were aware, of course, of differences between that scene and the visitations of long ago.

Under his ornate button-blanket of red and blue stroud, Jimmy Sewid wore slacks and a white shirt. Nor was the occasion the coming of a son to manhood or the giving of a chief's daughter in marriage. It was to mark the opening of the very fine Kwakiutl Museum in which are displayed masks and other artifacts returned by Ottawa to the band after a lapse of 57 years.

It was plain to us that this was a great day for the Cape Mudge Kwakiutl. The mood was festive. What had been launched as an invitation-only celebration by the band's Nuyumbalees Society (meaning: "the beginning of all legends") was expanded in a gesture of typically lavish Indian hospitality to come-one-come-all.

Before we crossed Discovery Passage from Campbell River to the Quadra island village, Win and I were asked not to bring our car. Buses would be laid on for the run from ferry wharf to village. Also, we were bidden not to bring food.

With reason. The Cape Mudge people, schooled by centuries of experience, are superlatively good at feasting the visitor.

For dinner, barbecued salmon fresh-caught by the band's troller fleet. Also, excellent clam chowder, turkey with stuffing and cranberry sauce, salads in several varieties, baked potatoes and rolls . . . a collation fit to bend the cardboard plates on which it was served. Four shiny coffee urns and a huge cake with the museum pictured on its icing took care of the later courses.

All this was free, offered in accordance with the Kwakiutl philosophy which Sewid stated gravely — though with the suggestion of a twinkle — to the diners.

"We would look on it as a shame to us to invite you people to visit us," he said, "then to charge you for your food."

The ceremonies began with morning service in Walker Memorial United Church, named for an early pastor of a religious community which has served the village for more than 100 years. Then came the welcoming of guests and traditional dances in a community hall fronted by a large-scale painting of the Tsisiutl, or two-headed serpent of native mythology.

One of these dances, incidentally, deserves a far wider showing than it has so far received. In it, the animal kingdom, splendidly masked and costumed, passes in review before a charmed human watcher.

Then to the museum for a final ceremony before the sea snail-shaped building was declared open.

A succession of visiting chiefs — Nimpkish, Nootka, Squamish and others — spoke, or rather orated in the manner dear to the Indian heart.

The white man came in for a shrewd dig or two. Disappointingly, by no means all of the artifacts seized by the federal government in 1922 as part of its anti-potlatch clampdown had been returned. The band would welcome the rest back.

But past was past, various speakers concluded. We were all friends on this day, and all welcome.

To conclude, a girl in ceremonial dress was held "prisoner" within a square of red cedar bark strips gripped by elders of the band. Only after proper ritual could she be set free.

With the gift of cedar barks for luck, we were then passed into the museum.

The searing totem pole in its two-storey well, carved by Sam Henderson and his gifted sons, was new. But the pair of welcome figures set against an impressive backdrip just inside the door were familiar. Those poles had until very recently guarded the portals of Campbell River Museum's notably fine Indian room. In a hands-across-the-water gesture, they had been restored to Cape Mudge, their ancestral home.

Certainly the welcome they suggest couldn't have been warmer. We came home with our lucky cedar bark, well-stuffed and feeling that we'd been to a bang-up party.

Pair safe in sinking

A man and his wife were rescued unharmed when their 12-metre fishing vessel, the Silver Foam, sank early Sunday near Cape Lazo off the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Cause of the sinking is being investigated.

Lights off, lights on

The lights went out in Saanich briefly this morning when a construction truck hit a power pole near Borden and MacKenzie, but B.C. Hydro had them back on again in less than an hour.

Apartments still scarce

Apartment units continue to be a scarce commodity in the Victoria area although the supply situation has eased a bit, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation reported today.

The vacancy rate is 1.7 per cent, up from 1.1 per cent in October, CMHC said.

The corporation has stated that a vacancy rate of 3 to 4 four per cent is an ideal balance of supply and demand.

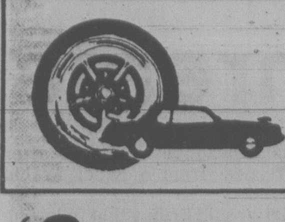
The latest survey, conducted in April, showed there were 19,671 occupied apartments out of a total supply of 20,006. This compares with 19,512 occupied units out of 19,720 in October.

This showed that both the supply and demand had increased during the past six months, although the demand was growing at a slower rate.

An additional 463 apartment rental units were under construction in April.

In detail, the survey showed the Victoria City vacancy rate is 1.9 per cent, up from 1.2 per cent. The rate is almost nil in the Cook Street area, is 1.3 per cent in James Bay and 1.9 along Fort St.

It is nil in Sidney, almost nil in Oak Bay, 1.2 in Saanich and nil in Central Saanich. The only municipality with a signficant vacancy rate is Esquimalt at 2.2 per cent and that is below what the CMHC regards as a stable supply-demand level.



WHEELS

Dear Mike: Ever since I bought my 1977 Malibu new, the steering wheel vibrates when I'm stopped at a red light. This is very annoying. The steering wheel doesn't vibrate when the car is in motion. The dealer claims that the vibration is caused by the smog device. He says he cannot alter it in any way. Do you have a suggestion? — RATTLED

Dear Rattled: Rough engine idle can be caused by any of three basic engine systems: carburetion, ignition and emissions. The problems can also be due to maladjustments in two or all three of these systems. Mechanics like to blame subtle or hard-to-diagnose ills on the emissions system. And it's surely true that smog equipment doesn't help an engine run smoothly under even the best circumstances. But if your emission-control system is clean and working properly, and if your carburetion and ignition are tuned, you shouldn't feel bad vibes through your steering wheel. So take your car back and explain to the mechanic that you won't accept "smog junk" as an excuse.

* * *

Dear Mike: My 1971 Olds Delta 88 was stored for six years and now has only 10,000 miles on the odometer. The automatic transmission emits a whining noise. The colder the day, the louder the noise. As the car warms up, the whine goes away. There's also a clicking sound from the transmission at idle in all ranges but neutral. Any ideas? —WHINO

Dear Whino: Despite the low mileage, I suspect a buildup of varnish inside the trans. The clicking noises could be caused by loose converter-to-flywheel bolts or possibly a cracked flywheel. With automatic transmission noises, it's best to remove and inspect the pan. An experienced mechanic can "read" the metal filings in the pan and can often catch future problems before they happen.

Dear Mike: I own a 1974 Dodge 4wd Ramcharger with a 360-cid V-8 and automatic. My son says that installing headers and dual exhausts will increase gas mileage by 2-3 mpg. Is this correct? Thank you. — RAMCHARGED

Dear Ram: I'm afraid not. In my opinion, aftermarket exhausts systems have been grossly overrated in the past. Header and muffler manufacturers have advertised benefits that simply don't pan out in practice. Your Ramchargers, which has a fairly free-flowing set of exhaust manifolds and no catalytic converter, might average 0.1 to 0.3 miles per gallon higher in gas mileage with headers and duals, but surely not 2-3 mpg.

By PAULINE GRAVES

Those people lucky enough to have an extra bedroom can have the pleasure, luxury actually, of turning it into a room of pure decoration or of making it almost totally utilitarian, such as a home office or a sewing room. If possible though, a room that can be used in more than one way earns its keep. And the second function frequently is that of providing extra bed space for overnight guests.

Such a room, by interior designer Carole Eichen, is seen here. Decorating the room is pure fun, built around a South Seas motif. However, the couch, a twin mattress, does offer sleeping space when such is needed. Most of the time the room is for rest and relaxation and has a totally different environment from the rest of the house, which in itself is a form of relaxation.

The wall paper, white lines on blue background, is a stylized and simplified interpretation of yacht building blueprints, and it sets the South Seas theme. Yachts and the South Seas are almost synonymous. Instead of a conventional bed or sofa, a platform 11½-feet long, 3½-feet wide and 14-inches high, stretches the length of the wall. Although sturdily made of plywood on a 2"x4" frame, the platform is covered with split reeds. These are found as fence material or in roll-up window blinds. The platform extends beyond the length of the mattress, and these end sections function conveniently as tables, handy for lamps, flowers and books.

MDs not ready for old-age boom?

HALIFAX (CP) — What once was a baby boom is developing into an old-age boom and doctors should be preparing for it, says the dean of medicine at Dalhousie University's medical school.

Dr. J. Donald Thatcher says the need for a changed emphasis in medical care will begin to emerge gradually as senior citizens place increasing pressure on the total health care delivery system, a trend that already has begun to develop.

However, while demographic studies show that the number of senior citizens is rising toward a peak in the 1990s, they also predict a decrease in Canada's overall population in the 1980s to 1971's level.

The increased demand for doctors treating the elderly should be balanced by a declining demand for general practitioners, Thatcher says.

In Canada last year there was a net loss of doctors because of the large medical emigration to the United States since the end of the Vietnam war, he says.

Jack Hare, executive-director of the Health Services and Insurance Commission, says Nova Scotia now is subsidizing doctors in an attempt to get them into rural areas which could not, without that subsidy, afford to have a full-time resident doctor.

Set the volumn control early

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY — The house is finally quiet. My husband and two teen-agers are in bed, but I am so upset I can't sleep.

Our marriage has been so wonderful, plus we are blessed with two healthy children who have always been well-behaved.

We were an exceptionally happy family until about a year ago. So what's the problem? Loud Music!

Abby, why must music be played so loud today? The only answer we get from our children is, "Because."

The words exchanged between my husband and son tonight were terrible. My husband asked our son politely to please turn down the stereo. Our son ignored him, so his father turned the stereo off and announced that neither of the children would be allowed to play music again until they agreed to keep the volume at a level that was comfortable for us.

I've never seen my husband so angry. The kids are mad and I'm upset.

Do other parents have this problem? And how do they handle it?

AM-FM

DEAR AM — Yes, many parents have that problem. And they handle it the same way your husband handled it — by exploding and finally laying down the law.

The upsetting scene could have been avoided had you laid down the law as soon as the kids started playing music at a volume that was disturbing to you.

Loud music is "in," but the price one pays for constantly assaulting his eardrums with loud sounds is impaired hearing.

* * *

DEAR ABBY — My son has a lot of friends, and lately they have been getting married one after the other. Here is my gripe. He has to lay out $48 every time he rents one of those fancy tuxedos the bridegroom has picked out for him to wear to the wedding.

I think if the bridegroom wants his attendants to wear tuxes, he should pick up the tab for the rental. What is your opinion?

MOM

DEAR MOM — It would be nice if the bridegroom could afford it, but most cannot, so it's customary for each attendant to pay for the rental of his own tuxedo.

* * *

DEAR ABBY — I'm expecting my firt child in four months. All the beauty of pregnancy and motherhood are slowly being destroyed by the horror stories of other women.

Ladies I hardly know have told me how the doctor had to break the baby's arm for delivery, cords choking babies during delivery, etc. And as though that weren't enough, I've been hearing how "dangerous" hospitals are. (Unclean, mistakes made in the lab and pharmacy.) It's all so frightening.

These stories are entirely unsolicited and very unnerving.

FIRST TIMER

DEAR FIRST — You can't stop them from being started, but you can stop them from being finished by saying "Thanks, but I'd rather not hear it."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A divorced woman signed NAMELESS asked if she should let her boyfriend sleep with her while her 15-year-old son was home. I'm glad you said no.

When I was 15 I caught my mother in bed with her boyfriend. I hated it. It hurt me to the core. My respect for my mother dropped so far it wouldn't even register on a scale.

It hurt me to see someone I loved being "used" by a man who couldn't control his urges until after marriage.

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Why did you assume your mother was "used" by a man who couldn't control his urges? Maybe she used him because she couldn't control her urges.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago our small gift shop was robbed.

A few days ago a young man came into the shop, introduced himself and asked to meet the owners. We identified ourselves as the owners, then he told us that he and two other boys had commited the robbery. He apologized and made full restitution for the merchandise stolen, plus 8 per cent interest for the 10 years!

The money will be used for a good cause.

OVERWHELMED

DEAR OVERWHELMED: Thanks for a real day-brightener.
